The DEBUNKER

By John Harvey Farbay, Ph.D.

LIONS DO NOT USUALLY ATTACK HUMAN BEINGS

The old idea that a lion would sight a man at a distance and run him down to eat him has been exploded by explorers like Carl Akeley, James L. Clark and Martin Johnson. These men say that lions are afraid of human beings, and will usually run from them. Often, they even ignore the presence of a man. Of course, if they are cornered, they will fight to a finish. Old lions, no longer able to catch wild prey, are also dangerous; but a healthy lion prefers to run away when he sees a man.
