Weekly Farm Forest Market Report

July 21, 1952

The Willamette valley sawlog market was generally unchanged last week. Demand was good in most of the valley, but the undertone showed some weakness in Clackamas county.

Sword fern took a seasonal drop of 4 cents a bunch. Other forest products were generally unchanged, according to the weekly farm forest products market report prepared from data supplied by the State Board of Forestry to the OSC Extension Service.

Sawlogs:

Closer grading of second-growth Douglas fir sawlogs was noted at some points but prices held about steady during the past week. No. 2's were $38 to $47 a thousand, mostly $40 to $42. River prices in the northern and central valley ranged up to $50, the ceiling price. No. 3 sawlogs were mostly $35 to $38. Camp-run logs were $38 to $42. Demand for 8-foot logs ranged from fair to very good at $14 to $18 a cord, or $34 to $38 a thousand. These short logs were wanted by many mills, especially in the southern part of the valley.

Pulpwood:

Pulpwood was in limited demand. Unpeeled hemlock and true firs were $14 to $17 a cord. Douglas fir brought $14 to $15.

Poles and Piling:

Barkie poles and piling 50 feet and over were in good demand at Albany and Eugene, but slacked off in the Portland area. 50-foot barkie poles ranged from 20½ to 28 cents a lineal foot, with longer poles up to 45 cents. Short poles were still moving slowly, although there was some call for good car stakes in Clackamas county.

Hardwood:

Alder, ash and maple logs generally brought $35 to $40 a thousand at Willamette valley hardwood mills. Cottonwood logs were around $30.

Other Forest Products:

Sword fern at Eugene dropped from 16 cents to 12 cents a bunch as harvest of the new crop started.

How To Handle A Jealous Old Dog

Jealousy of a new dog in the home is a common trait in old dogs who have held sway as the sole family pet for a long time, but careful consideration and diplomatic tactics on the owner's part can help a great deal in bridging this difficult period, states the Gaines Dog Research Center, New York.

The principal point is to make sure that the old dog receives as much attention as the newcomer, advises the Center. When you pet or play with the new pup be sure to give some caresses to your old pet, so he won't feel shut out. Don't scold him if he resents the pup's attempts to bite his ears or maul his tail. A lively young puppy will often torment an old dog trying to tease him into play, and a threatening growl is the only way the latter can defend his right to be let alone. If he doesn't take his own part keep the puppy away from your old dog when he appears to be annoyed. When you feed the puppy be sure the old dog gets a tidbit even if it isn't his regular feeding time.

Never kennel a new dog or puppy with an old dog until you are sure they are friendly. Sometimes an old dog will bully a pup and one of the usual habits is to lie at the door of their kennel and refuse to allow the pup to enter. A separate yard and house is best for the new dog until the pair become pals.

After a while, says the Center, if the old dog is assured that he still holds your strongest affection but that the new dog is also there to stay, he will probably be very happy with the companionship of a second dog in the home.

it certainly has freshened up that old business block a great deal. The IOOF building is one of the oldest buildings in the city, and its fresh coat of white with green trim has really brightened up that corner.

The Democrats are struggling this week among themselves over the issues of states rights, civil rights, filibustering, and will come out of this convention one step further along the road toward the freedom of the souls of men from the tyranny of others, sometimes great corporations, or political machines. But when it is all over the Democrats will go home stronger than ever.

Estes Kefauver has been in the thick of the fight for the little people and their interests along with many others. We are sorry that it is necessary to fight with our southern brothers, but sometimes those gentlemen are very selfish in their demands. They have been stubborn in the fight over the loyalty oath. Yet anyone who listened to the convention over the radio will have to agree that there was no valid reason that they could not sign the oath. The southerners have been resentful of any attempts on the part of congress to curb their right to filibuster. It is my contention that to allow the privilege of filibustering is the most un-American parliamentary procedure known to man, and it should be stopped at once.

The southern Democrats have been using their unholy alliances with the reactionary Republicans to defeat many humanitarian measures in the congress over the past 20 years. We watch with a great deal interest the fight of Kefauver to gain the nomination, whether he succeeds we don't know, but we are pulling for him just the same.
