QUESTION: We are planning to install a bath in our 7-room house which has two rooms on the second floor. Would it be better to install it on the upper floor or in a room which we are adding to the house?
—D. G., Laconia, New Hampshire

ANSWER: For the sake of convenience it is best to locate a bathroom near a second floor bedroom, with a lavatory on the first floor. Should economy be important, an unfinished room is more easily converted. There is no need to rip out the finish and repair it later. It is easier to conceal pipes, brace fixtures into walls and build semi-recessed fixtures.

QUESTION: The outside of my garage is covered with asphalt shingles leaving the nail points showing on the inside. Would roll roofing placed between the 2x's on the inside to cover the nails and also to act as an insulator cause the garage to sweat?
—J. W. H., Cleveland, Ohio

ANSWER: While roll roofing can be used, anything jammed against it will cause punctures. The garage will not sweat, but moisture trapped inside the walls will condense and drip down the wall with or without insulation. If the garage is not sufficiently heated, using standard insulation with a dry wall finish will turn out a much neater job.

QUESTION: I would like to use boiled linseed oil to dress up my tile floors. Can you tell me how long I must boil the oil before using it and if it will make my floors slippery?
—C. R., Belleville, New Jersey

ANSWER: Both boiled and raw linseed oil are obtainable at your local paint store and boiling at home is not necessary. Used like a floor wax on tile, it is an excellent polish. It is not sticky when dry and will not make the floor slippery.
