1. HOW LONG DOES THE AVERAGE YOUNGESTER WATCH TV?

2. CAN YOU AFFORD TO Gossip?

3. WHERE IS AMERICA'S LONGEST FOOTPATH?

(1) A study made in Cincinnati reports that the average youngster watches TV for 3.7 hours on school days and 5.5 hours each on Saturdays and Sundays, or 29.5 hours a week. The same child spends 25 hours a week in the classroom. Looking at TV, says "Changing Times" magazine, is an activity in which the child plays a completely passive role. The contribution to the child's character and personality is nil. There are three ways of coping with television and the child: (1) don't own a TV set, (2) lay down the law, (3) use intelligent discipline to make TV a constructive force.

(2) Gossiping pours emotional energy into things we cannot change. This goes for men as well as women, writes Dr. Dorothy C. Finkler in her book, "How to Make Your Emotions Work for You." Our purpose in gossiping, she explains, certainly isn't to make over the people we gossip about. And it has an emotional price tag.

We should examine our emotional budgets to see whether we can, in terms of our happiness, afford to spend emotional energy without getting anything in re-
