Pinochlers Hoarse From Softball Cheering

Hoarse from their vocal support of the canyon's softballers were those of Gates Lucky Twelve Pinochle club, Thursday afternoon. Stemming some of the rough edges was the macaroni salad served by hostess Mrs. Edna Duval to her card guests.

Still much keyed-up was Mrs. Bea Graunke, for she took off into the wild blue yonder with high prize. Mrs. Bert Vanderhoff nabbed the brass-ring prize, pinochle prize. Mrs. Dorene Fowler found solace in the gift that goes with the dubious low prize. Mrs. Dorothy Johnson, as the club's guest took part in all these "goings on".

Erwert - Anderson Wedding Saturday

Mt. Angel—The Rev. Gabriel Morris, O.B.S., of Mount Angel Abbey, read the double-ring ceremony and officiated at the nuptial mass at 9 o'clock Saturday morning, Aug. 23, in St. Mary's Catholic church, when Miss Arlene Anne Erwert, daughter of Mrs. Anna Erwert, was wed to James T. Anderson, son of Mrs. Ruth Witt of Mill City.

Arrangements of pastel colored gladioluses, greenery and lighted tapers were used in the decorations on the altars and in the church. Serving at mass were Leon Schieder and Anthony Dummer. Mrs. Vincent Smith played the organ and also accompanied the soloist, Bernard Smith, who sang preceding the ceremony and while the bride placed her bouquet on the Blessed Virgin altar before the recessional march.

The white slipper satin wedding gown worn by the bride was made princess style, the skirt having a long court train. The gown was designed with a yoke of lace dotted with seed pearls, tiny self-covered buttons down the back, and long sleeves extending to points over the wrists. The fingertip veil of illusion was scalloped edged and held in place by a crown with seed pearl trim. For her flowers, the bride carried three white cattelya orchids and stephanotis spray on a white lace covered prayerbook, which was a gift of the bridegroom.

Mrs. Donald Flatman, Mill City, sister of the bridegroom, was the maid of honor, and bridesmaids were Mrs. James Bradshaw, Salem, and Miss Mary Lou Faulhaber, of Mt. Angel. The bridal attendants were gown alike. Their white dresses were nylon net over taffeta, styled with fitted bodice, square neckline with a pleated detail fashioning the cap sleeves. The ruffled skirt of nylon net over taffeta was made ballerina length. The attendants' headdresses were bandeaus of white net with white vanda orchids and hite bouvardia trim and they wore mitts of white nylon net. The maid of honor carried a crescent of lavender vanda orchids, white gladioluses and stephanotis, while the flowers for the bridesmaids were arrangements of white gladioluses and lavender vanda orchids, providing the only color for the all-white wedding.

Six brothers of the bride were in the wedding party. The bride, the youngest of four daughters, was given

Detroit Church Plans Incorporation Soon

Detroit—Incorporation of the Detroit church was approved by members at a meeting following church services Sunday. The group voted to be designated henceforth as the 'Detroit Church of Christ', which was the original name chosen for the church when it was first organized over 10 years ago.

Improvements on the church building, including a foundation and planned remodeling, have been delayed due to the fact that payment for the former church building has not yet been received. A report received by James Stock, minister, indicates that an allowance of $4000 will be made for the old building. Church authorities claim that theirs is the only group remaining to receive reimbursement for property in the dam reservoir area.

Mr. Stock announced that a sign bearing the new church name will be made. Otis White was appointed to arrange for lighting connections in the church.

Mrs. Helen Baughn was elected to serve as treasurer for the church until the charter is drawn up and new officers are elected.

Following the ceremony, a breakfast was served for the bridal party at the home of the bride's mother. A wedding dinner was served at noon in the St. Mary's school dining room, with covers placed for the bridal couple and their attendants, and members of both families. Serving at dinner were cousins of the bride, Miss Arlene Duda, Miss Anita Rehm and Miss Donna Zielinski of Canby.

During the afternoon a reception was given at St. Mary's school for over 200 guests. The bride's table was covered with a lace cloth, and centered with a white decorated wedding cake with arrangements of pink bouvardia. The bride's two sisters, Mrs. Charles Stirber of Canby and Mrs. Alfred Bochsler of Mount Angel, served the cake, after the couple cut the traditional first slice. Presiding at the coffee urn was her other sister, Mrs. Edward Sacchi of Martinez, Cal.

Miss Janice Norton of Woodburn passed the guest book. In charge of the gift table were Miss Mayanna Miller, Woodburn and Miss Mary Lou Sthamman of Silverton. Assisting about the rooms were classmates of the bridal couple at Mount Angel academy and Mount Angel preparatory school.

Dog Obedience Class Work Pays in Home

Dog obedience training, learned by thousands of dog owners in classes held by organized groups, can be put to many practical uses in every day life, states Harry Miller, director of the Gaines Dog Research Center, New York. The regulation exercises carried out in standardized competitive events which have become one of the most popular forms of dog activities needn't be restricted to that purpose alone. In fact, adds Mr. Miller, the dog that is a paragon in class and allowed to be a miscreant at home isn't getting any practical benefit from his lessons and neither is his owner.

When a dog has been taught to "sit and stay," for example, there are countless incidences every day where the command can be applied. A dog that does this exercise regularly in class can just as readily be given the command when making visits, traveling, on shopping trips or whenever he accompanies his owner in public places. It can also be applied in many ways around the home.

One of the most practical uses for obedience commands is in traffic or on city streets where "heeling," and "sit and stay" can be used for going through crowds, in aisles of shops, at street crossings or when you stop for any reason. Some rather remarkable results along this line have been achieved by students of Don Short in the companion dog training classes given at Orange Coast College, Costa Mesa, Calif.

When your dog goes to market with you, he can be assigned to an out-of-the-way spot by the door to "stay" while you go inside to do the shopping. When calling on friends or neighbors, your dog will be much more welcome if he is given a place to "sit and stay" and your visit, too, will be more pleasant without half an eye on a cherished flower bed or newly-upholstered chair to make sure that it hasn't become the object of your dog's attention.

When the family is assembling for a ride in the car there's no need for your dog to romp about, excitedly, get in the way or jump in the car before you are ready to start. According to Mr. Miller, this is one time when his "sit and stay" lesson comes in handy. He can be commanded to sit by the car while you get out the keys, open the door and pack in parcels or luggage. When you give the word, have him get in and take his place without clambering about and interfering with the other passengers.
