The Debunker
BY JOHN HARVEY FURBAY PH.D.
THE PRESIDENT AND VICE-PRESIDENT DON'T HAVE TO COME FROM DIFFERENT STATES

Many people believe that the Constitution of the United States forbids the electing of a Vice President from the same State as the President. This is not true. There is nothing to prevent the election of both from the same State. The practice has been, however, to select candidates from different States, and different parts of the country, in order to gain more votes from the people living in these different sections of the country. It is good politics, but is not required by the Constitution.
