

Permission Needed To Cut Christmas Trees

Assistant state forester Lynn F. Cronemiller of Salem said this week that the state forestry department has been stressing an education program which will aid people in eliminating wasteful and harmful Christmas tree cutting practices. He advised that Christmas trees should come from marginal lands which are not to be used permanently for forests; from Christmas tree "farms" where trees are grown commercially for the Yule trade; from pasture lands where the trees are not desirable; from forest thinnings and from the farm woodlands.

The forester reported that no Christmas trees will be cut from state forests this year as many are understocked and extensive planting and aerial seeding programs are under way in such areas as the Tillamook Burn and similar tracts. He advised that commercial tree choppers would be required to obtain a harvesting permit from the state forester's office before removing the Yule trees from private or public lands. This permit is in addition to permission and sale of trees by the landowner.

For those Oregonians who plan to cut their own tree, the following guidelines have been suggested by Cronemiller:

1. Don't cut your tree close to the road and spoil the beauty of the roadside.

2. Secure permission before cutting from private or public property.

3. Don't cut all of the trees from one patch.

4. Don't cut the top from a large tree.

5. When you cut a tree, leave a branch or two on the stump. A branch will develop later into another tree, and save several years growing time.

6. Be certain you are satisfied with the tree of your choice before you cut it. Wasted trees are wasted years.

As a final word of caution, the forester urged extreme caution in using lighted candles on the inflammable conifers. Place your tree in a cool part of the room—keep it away from heaters, stoves and other sources of fire.

Community Planning For Better Health

The third annual Oregon Rural Health Conference will be held in the Senator hotel in Salem on Friday and Saturday, December 5, 6, 1952. This year's conference on "Community Planning for Better Health" will be highlighted by such outstanding people as Edmund K. Yantes, M.D., Clinton county health officer, Wilmington, Ohio, and Aubrey Gates, Little Rock, Arkansas, field director for the Council on Rural Health, American Medical Association. The purpose of this meeting is to gain a common understanding through discussion, that will lead us to an effective method of attacking rural health problems in Oregon.

Local community leaders and everyone interested in ways and means to achieve and maintain better health in rural areas are invited to attend and to take part in the discussion.

In addition to the out of state speaker, representatives of the Oregon State Grange, Farmers Union, Oregon Farm Bureau, County Extension, Oregon Rural Health Council, Oregon State Medical Society, universities, PTA and other interested organizations will participate in the program.

Detroit High Lettermen Sponsor Public Dance

Detroit high school lettermen will sponsor a dance Friday evening, December 5 in the school gymnasium as an athletic fund raising project.

Proceeds from the dance will be used toward the lettermen's award trip in the spring and to promote the spring sports program. Francis Kettleton, Detroit high school athletic coach, reports that the lettermen hope to contribute toward the student activity fund as well.

Interesting decorations are planned for the gymnasium and music will be supplied by Gordon Winchcomb's orchestra.

of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Kimsley, has been named Susan Jean. She has three brothers.

The Ken Golliets went to Brooks for Thanksgiving where they spent the day with the George Ramp family.

Licensees Reminded By Liquor Control

Licensees of the Oregon liquor control commission are reminded that all current license certificates expire at midnight December 31, and that renewal applications and fees should be sent to the commission prior to December 15. This is necessary to allow ample time for issuance of 1953 certificates by the first of the year, according to Administrator W. H. Baillie.

The mere act of filing an application for a 1953 license will not legally permit an operator to sell alcoholic beverages after December 31 unless he has a valid license certificate or a letter from the commission authorizing such sale, Baillie said.
