Thanks Folks!

All of us at Mountain States Power Company appreciate very, very much the co-operation you customers have given in the voluntary conservation of electricity during the shortage period which seems now to be at a close. Your power savings were important in helping to prevent more extensive curtailment of industry and jobs.

We also thank, most sincerely, those industries which were required by the Defense Electric Power Administration to curtail power usage by 10 per cent since November 17.

Yes, Folks, we thank you, but we do want you to know that, although the hydroelectric power supply has been greatly increased by recent rains and warm weather, substantial amounts of steam generated power will still be required to carry the big load of the Northwest. For the past four months all steam plants had to be operated at full capacity, around the clock, and this has raised our costs tremendously.

That's why we and other utilities of the area have found it necessary to apply a surcharge to your bills. This surcharge is definitely temporary and will be eliminated the minute we recover the accumulated extra costs of this abnormal steam plant operation.

Again, thanks for your co-operation and your understanding of the Northwest's critical power problem.
