

OUT OF GODFREY'S TEABAG

"I've been skating all day, and believe me it's good to sit down for a change—on a chair.

Truck drivers have a sense of humor. Did you ever notice the little signs on the back of some of the trucks. One I saw the other day in New Jersey read: "This truck stops for brunettes and blondes and will back up fifty feet for a redhead."

Archie Bleyer and the boys in the band gave me a present of one of those Tattersal vests. It's purple and yellow with pink stripes. I can't wear that—it's the wrong size.

I remember when I did my first TV show, way back in 1946. B.C. ... before chlorophyll.

I've been pretty lucky with this skating business. Two years on skates without falling down. Tonight there will be 16,000 people at the Madison Square Garden skating festival waiting to see me fall down—and break my—record.

HOW I MET MY HUSBAND!

Joan Davis, star of NBC-TV's "I Married Joan," gives a prize for each letter used in this column.

Here's the January Winner:

When I met my future husband, I was living in Los Angeles and vacationing at the Desert Inn in Las Vegas. At the pool one day, I saw Gloria De Haven swimming there and decided to snap her picture.

There was a fellow in the pool swimming near Miss De Haven and I kept motioning him to get out of the picture. He thought I was waving to him and he just kept waving back. My girl friend, a practical joker, deciding that my stooped position over the camera was too tempting to let pass, sneaked up behind me and gave a hard shove. Both the camera and I landed in the water on the head of the stranger.

When I came up for air, the chap was standing along the edge of the pool and was so angry that he threw the camera at me. Before I could apologize, he hurried off.

That night, attending the floor show, I saw him sitting alone at a table, so I went over, sat down beside him and explained. Later on, I discovered that he also lived in Los Angeles and, not so long after, we were married.

Incidentally, we spent our honeymoon at the Desert Inn and still have the camera.
