Red Cross Program May Discontinue

"There is a real danger that Red Cross services essential to the well-being of Marion county may have to be discontinued after June 30," Frank Parcher, chapter manager has announced.

Demands for Red Cross services during recent years have increased sharply, but financial support has not increased accordingly, which means the local Red Cross chapter has had to use reserve funds, now exhausted, to keep its program going, Parcher explained.

What this means, he said, is that some of the Red Cross services must be discontinued, and since the blood program is one of the most expensive programs to operate—$4,000 during 1952—it may be curtailed in the county.

Failure to meet the $51,000 fund campaign goal may also mean discontinuance of health services, including instruction in home care of the sick, first aid and water safety, Parcher said.

"It would be unfortunate if the blood program were discontinued in the county because it not only helps alleviate suffering caused by war but provides free blood to Marion county residents through local hospitals. This blood, if sold, would have had a value of approximately $50,000," Parcher explained.

Discontinuing home nursing and first aid instruction also would seriously impede the county's civil defense program.
