Game Farm Pheasants Are Good Game Birds, 15-Year Study Shows

Game farm pheasants, when released are healthy and highly adaptable to their new environment.

This was the conclusion made recently by the Oregon Cooperative Oregon State college after 15 years of rigidly-controlled study of the popular game bird. Research was conducted on isolated islands in Puget Sound where the naturalness of conditions were ideal for accuracy of findings.

Emphatically disproved was the commonly held view that game farm pheasants are inbred and thus lacking in vigor. In six nesting seasons on Protection island, two cocks and six hens increased to 1898 surviving pheasants. Egg fertility was 92.5 percent in the sixth season. Furthermore, chicks born in late May or Early June from game farm stock could often attain or surpass the weight of their parents by November 1 of the same year.

Numerous island experiments showed little difference in survival rates of the pheasant chicks over 8 weeks of age between those reared by a brood hen and the artificially-brooded stock. However, chicks in the six to eight week class had a higher survival and adjusted better to habitat when brooded by a hen. As pheasant chicks are highly susceptible to cold, rain and other unfavorable conditions, their release is not recommended under eight weeks.

Further experiments proved that game farm birds are just as secretive, elusive and alert as the wild ones. At the end of each year of study on Eliza island all pheasants used were removed by trapping or hunting. It was found the last pheasant taken was just as often a cleverly-elusive game farm bird as a wild one.

Although artificially-reared pheasants are highly suitable as game birds the total number of birds needed to stock hunting areas can not come from game farms. Wild stock must be relied on.

ETERNITY IS BORN

Flowers and trees burst into a symphony of color and beauty. Meadows and woodlands put on bright robes of green. Spring is the symbol of new life. ¶ But as time moves on, nature grows old. Blossoms fade and wither; leaves turn brown and fall. At last, nature buries herself under a blanket of ice and snow. ¶ Is this our fate? Does our existence fit into the same pattern of nature: birth, life, death? De we spend only a few score years on earth, and then are no more? ¶ In churches all over the world this Easter morning, the cry comes ringing back: "HE IS RISEN! HE IS RISEN!" A new and glorious hope comes from the empty tomb—the hope of everlasting life for all who will believe. ¶ Come to church this Easter morning. Let us thank God that for you and me, eternity is born.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL . . . ALL FOR THE CHURCH
 The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For the sake of his children and nation. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) Which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.
