Traffic Accidents Lower In State This Year

Traffic accidents and injuries so far this year appear to be running slightly below 1956, even though the death count for Oregon remains virtually the same.

A release from the Department of Motor Vehicle's traffic safety division shows 19,099 traffic accidents were reported to the state through the end of April. This compares with 22,222 accidents during the same period a year ago.

About 500 fewer personal injuries were reported this year for the January through April period.
