Oregon in 3-Way Tie on Pedestrian Protection

Oregon's 1956 pedestrian protection program has won a first place award from the American Automobile Association.

In Oregon's classification of states, New Jersey, Maryland and Delaware were in a three-way tie for second place and California and Colorado received honorable mentions.

State officials said the award was made in the basis of reports submitted covering Oregon's pedestrian casualty record, accident records, legislation and enforcement, engineering, safety organization, school safety and public information.

The 1956 pedestrian toll in the state was 53 deaths and 1267 injuries. This compares with 67 pedestrian deaths and 1298 injuries in 1955.

James R. Banks, manager of the Department of Motor Vehicle's traffic safety division and executive secretary of the Oregon Traffic Safety Commission, was also given a citation by the AAA for "leadership in pedestrian protection." Banks served as contact man for the state.

Editor's Letter Box

Dear Editor:

As a result of a recent announcement in your newspaper, of my trip to Pennsylvania, I received so many birthday remembrances from so many of my good friends in Mill City and Gates (and even from Corvallis) that I wonder if you would convey my thanks to them through your columns.

If so, make it as follows: "Miss Georgia C. Shane of Salem, formerly of Mill City and Gates, wishes to convey her heartfelt thanks to all the dear friends who remembered her on her birthday, including Santiam Rebekah Lodge No. 166, from whom she received a beautiful corsage on the morning of her birthday."—Thank you, Georgia C. Shane.
