Plan to Exhibit At State Fair?

Salem—One of the questions most frequently asked at the Oregon State Fair is, "What must I do to enter an exhibit?" Now is the time for exhibitors and would-be exhibitors to start making plans. The 92nd State Fair opens this year at Salem August 31 and continues for 8 days. With a new fair commission, under the chairmanship of Jack Travis, and a new fair manager, Howard Maple, plans are in the works for an entirely new and different kind of fair this year. Mr. Travis and Mr. Maple are especially anxious that there be a large number of new exhibitors from all parts of the state.

"We need exhibitors from every county and especially from eastern and southern Oregon," Mr. Travis said. "We want the people of the state to feel that this is their fair and we want it truly representative." Whether exhibitors are thinking of entering a sewing or weaving exhibit, a bouquet of flowers or some dairy cattle, the first thing to do is to send for a premium book. They may be secured from the state fair in Salem, or at any county agent's office. The premium book lists thirteen departments in which exhibits can be entered, including dairy cattle, dual purpose cattle, beef cattle, draft horses, sheep and goats, swine, poultry, pigeons and rabbits, honey bee, land products, including fruits and grain, floral and garden, art, foods, and textiles.

The exhibitor, whether amateur or commercial, is urged to study carefully the rules for entering each division. In some departments there is a small entry fee. Others require no fee. Entry blanks can be secured without charge from the state fair. Exhibitors in the Textile Department must be Oregon residents. The last day for filing entries varies with different departments but is about the middle of August. Exhibitors who win prizes are given ribbons and cash awards which vary from fifty cents to $200. All exhibits will be returned to the owner at the end of the fair.
