Cupid Needs A Cue

Dear Amy:

I have a very serious problem and I don't know what to do about it. He is 23 and he dates my older sister. I'm 18 and I'm crazy about him. When he comes over the house to see my sister, I die a thousand deaths. My sister isn't in love with him. To her, he is just another boy. Neither one of them knows how I feel. If you could tell me what to do, you would be my friend forever.

Kid Sister

Dear Amy:

Tell your sister how you feel. If he means nothing to her, she might enjoy playing Cupid by becoming conveniently ill for their next date and then suggesting that he go out with you instead. Good luck, and I hope we have a long friendship!

Dear Amy:

Last week you published a letter concerning the husband who was seen kissing the maid. You advised the writer of the letter to mind her own business and say nothing to the man or the maid. I disagree with you, Amy. All she is trying to do is to protect her friend's interests and I feel that she should certainly inform Lothario that his deceptions have been noticed and nip this romance in the bud.

Mrs. Margaret M.

Dear Margaret:

We can't help what we see but we can help what we say. The problem does not concern her indirectly plus the fact that she values the couple's friendship. These are still the best reasons I know of for telling her to mind her own business.

Dear Amy:

I never thought I was of the marrying kind and for the past ten years I have avoided all sorts of entanglements with the opposite sex. But at last it happened! I met a girl that I would like to marry. The only trouble is that my reputation as a man disinterested in marriage has preceded me. I have asked her twice to marry me and each time she laughed and said I was kidding.

How can I make her see that I'm serious?

In Earnest

Dear Earnest:

Any woman can see by the light of a Diamond—rings that is!

Dear Amy:

We have one son at home, age six. Bright, alert and being an only child, slightly spoiled. His problem is that he longs for his Daddy to play with him after dinner.

After a hard day at the office, my husband is exhausted and would rather sit down with his paper and cigar.

Isn't he being unfair to the child, not to give him a half hour of his love. Please straighten him out!

A Young Mother

Dear Mother: You're the one that needs "straightening"! A man is entitled to some relaxation after dinner and if you're a smart wife, you'll explain these facts to your child. Be fair to your husband and he'll be more than fair to both of you.

Dear Amy:

For three years I have been going steady with a young girl of 21. I am 28. We are practically engaged. She says she loves me but I know that she goes out with other men. She breaks our dates at the last minute, often without even giving a reason. Sometimes when I call for her, she just isn't at home and her mother doesn't even know where she went.

Do you think that if I marry her I could change her?

Willing to Wait

Dear Willing:

Not a chance! This girl is too interested in running around to settle down. Your intentions of marriage would be wasted rather than appreciated.

Seek what you want elsewhere. You'll never find it here.

Dear Amy:

A young friend is an unmarried mother. Her baby is to be christened and she was told that since she isn't married only the godparents can hold the child.

Is this correct?

Kathy

Dear Kathy: The godparents hold the baby at any christening, regardless of the mother's marital status, so the situation is no reflection on your young friend.

Up and Down The Avenue

By Don Moffatt

Summer vacation is fast coming to a close. It doesn't seem possible but beginning Tuesday, September 1, school will again be in session in Mill City. Sad—but true—you young people, but you will have to get the dirt washed out of your ears, your hair cut and put on some clean clothes—and begin the grind again. To you young people now—it seems more or less like a prison or concentration camp—but it is really the best time of your lives. You still have the protection and care of loved ones at home, or at least most of you do. When you complete your "book larnin'" then the trouble begins. You'll have to get out and shift for yourselves. What becomes of you then will depend upon how well you have prepared yourselves during this formative stage of education. Work hard, get good marks, be industrious, courteous and in the long run it will pay off. The day when one could get an eighth grade education, then strike out for himself and make an easy living are gone—that is if they ever existed. Now it takes at least high school and preferably college to make the grade. Surely many get by all right—but it can be done a lot easier if you have a good formal education. Ask any honest man, who has had to get out and make a living. Believe me—it takes more than a "thinking man's fitter."

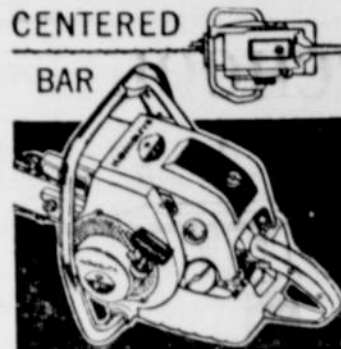

It won't be long now until the crack of high powered rifles will break the early morning silence in these parts. Hunters already are beginning to talk about hunting trips. The smell of Fall is in the air, and nights are getting cool. Many are wondering where their summer's wages have gone—heating bills are coming soon—my what a revolting thought.

Most of the forest camps in this area have been filled to capacity during the summer months. All you have to do to get people up in the hills is to plant a marker "overnight camping permitted" and you'll have people. This country is getting more conscious of outdoor camping. This is evidenced by the number of camping outfits on the highways each week end. It is an economical way to spend a vacation—healthful, too.

No Need For Continuous ADVERTISING

TRAFFIC LIGHTS Should be turned off at dangerous intersections to save electricity. Everybody knows it's a dangerous spot and that is sufficient.

TEACHERS— No need to review lessons. Tell the children just once and they'll never forget.

HIGHWAY POLICE Stop driving up and down the highways. No need to caution drivers by patrolling highways. All drivers know the laws and obey them anyway.

OUT-OF-TOWNERS— That advertise in local paper and mail order firms that send catalogues are wasting their money. Everyone knows what is sold at stores in Mill City and they'll all shop in Mill City.

BUT— JUST IN CASE You are the foolish kind, like the Notre Dame Cathedral that has stood for six centuries but still rings the bell every day to let people know it is there, and you believe in continuous and profitable advertising, then you will advertise in
