Miss Marcia Truax of Albany Union High school will appear with Harold Reeves of Lebanon in a violin and flute duet. Mrs. Doris Sheythe will accompany them.

Mr. Reeves is a teacher of instrumental music in the area schools of Lebanon and has been playing the flute for 20 years. He is also an experienced clarinet and saxophone player. Mr. Reeves also conducts an eight-piece dance band, which plays at all of the better Elks clubs of the state on weekends. A group of these players will also perform on the concert, playing a rumba called "Tico Tico" and a modern jazz number called "Moritat."

Members of this group are Mr. Reeves, David Crow, who is presently a law student at Willamette University and who plays trumpet; Larry Schmeil a student at the University of Oregon who plays bass and trumpet; Don Baxter, owner of a furniture store in Lebanon on drums, and Bob Harris of the local high school staff will play piano.

The public is urged to attend this benefit concert. All proceeds will go to the fund to buy uniforms for the band and chorus and for decorative shirts for the pep band.

Tickets may be purchased from any member of the local high school music club.

Elk Hunters Tell Different Ways to Hunt

By Jean Roberts

MEHAMA—As long as hunting is in season, Mehama residents are either coming home or going elk hunting.

Each hunting party has some unique way to hunt. Two hunters who stay for the entire season have built themselves comfortable stands in a meadow, complete with stoves, where they sit all day to watch for elk.

One man took a bicycle along to ride the trails. Still another used a power saw to cut trails through the jack pine from which to hunt.

One elk hunter carries a frying pan with him while he hunts just in case he gets lost, he'll be able to cook.

One young hunter bagged a 5-point bull in a strange way. He was lost, frightened and running when he ran through a thicket into a bull elk. Another hunter helped him carry out the meat and find his own party.

Still another hunter thought other members of his party were playing a joke on him when he found his hat full of dirt one morning inside the tent. The next morning it was again full of dirt. The culprit was a gopher who had come into the tent at night filled the hat with dirt and chewed up all the apples.

Veteran hunters quite often try to let the youngest hunter in the group bag an elk, but are not always successful. One young man sent to the most likely elk area while the others stayed near camp. Of course, three bulls came right past camp and were killed.

A drive was next made with 5 elk going toward the stand where the young hunter sat. Four elk broke away and just an old cow wandered past the eager hunter.

Another hunter failed to meet his companions on time. To remedy this he carried an alarm clock in his coveralls while hunting.

Grate, rather than chop dry onion, when using it as a seasoning. It takes less time and the flavor blends more quickly. The small particles of onion cook quicked, too.

Fruit cakes improve with freezing. Bake now and store in the freezer to avoid the pre-Christmas rush.
