University of Oregon Science Demonstration-Lecture Program Coming Here

The unique travelling program worked out by the University and supported by the National Science Foundation, is part of a national program to excite interest in science as a career for high school students, to stimulate interest in science and in better science teaching, and to encourage teachers and students in the construction and acquisition of better low-cost demonstration apparatus.

Nichols comes to the community in an especially-equipped station wagon which carries all of his demonstration apparatus. Most of this apparatus he designed and constructed himself.

During the week the travelling demonstration-program is in Mill City it will be available for appearances before civic groups as well as the scheduled appearances before science classes and student groups of the high school. For additional information consult J. B. Putman, school superintendent.

Area Merchants Get Ready For Hordes of Fishermen Who Will Arrive Saturday

Sporting goods stores, cafes and service stations are getting their feet braced this week for the coming of fishing season which opens Saturday, April 23. Each year sees more and more fishermen coming into this area to try their luck in catching the wily trout.

In addition to wild fish, anglers will have around 2,200,000 husky hatchery-reared trout to test their skill on during the coming fishing season scheduled to open Saturday, April 23. That's the number of trout of catchable size scheduled for release in the lakes and streams of the state from game commission hatcheries during the next several months. The vast majority of these legal rainbow trout with good numbers of cutthroat and lake trout also on the stocking agenda.

An additional 520,000 yearlings are being released, but anglers will have to wait a few years to reap the harvest from these plants. These fish represent the yearling steelhead and salmon held at hatcheries scheduled for release during the months when they can migrate to the ocean without running the gauntlet of anglers' hooks.

The heavily fished lakes and streams of the northwest region are destined to receive the largest apportionment of the legal rainbows.

Lions Club Entertains Athletes

The Mill City Lions club Monday night held their annual banquet honoring the athletes of Santiam Union High school. Nearly 60 were present for the banquet prepared by the ladies of the Presbyterian church under the chairmanship of Gladys Lake. They had a special cake made, a replica of Allen Field, which caused a lot of comment from the group.

District Governor Rickabaugh of Eugene was an honored guest for the evening making his official visit of the year. Because of a full program he spoke only briefly, giving the club credit for their many activities during the year. This was his second visit to this club since he was elected district governor of District 36-R. He made his first visit here at a steak fry in the park right after state convention last summer.

Main speakers for the evening were John Lewis, athletic director of Willamette University, who told what it takes to be a good athlete. He said sometimes the "A" students were not always the best athletes. He brought out the point that good athletes are those who have their minds on the game and can tell the things which need to be done to coordinate the team play.

Jerry Long, line coach at Willamette gave an exceptionally humorous talk, and also brought out some good points during his discourse. Main business transacted during the short business session was the nomination of officers from the floor. A full slate had been selected previously by the nominating committee last week. There were no additional nominations at the meeting Monday night, and the election will be held Monday, April 25.

MEHAMA—Burglars with a yen for beer broke into Ken Golliet's early Sunday morning and made off with six cases of beer. They also wanted some wine and cigarettes to go with beer so helped themselves to these commodities too.

The Deschutes river is to receive plants of 123,500 husky rainbows to lead the field in the popular central Oregon area. Metoluh anglers will get around 40,000 rainbows on which to test their skill, and Hodd river anglers can give a whirl at the same amount. An additional 30,000 summer steelhead yearlings will be planted in the Hood river system.

Central Oregon lakes, including Lost, Frog, Olallie, and Suttle, will be planted heavily with legal rainbows, while Odell and Cultus are to get heavy plants of yearling lake trout. A total of 34 stream systems and 25 lakes will get plants of legal sized fish in the Hood River, Bend and Klamath areas.
