"Money still seems to be the big factor in determining whether or not a high school senior goes on to college," says Dorothy Miller, OSU Family Finance Specialist.

A survey, conducted by Brigham Young University in cooperation with the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Economic Research service, showed that more than half of the 287 students who recently graduated from three rural Utah County schools wanted to go to college . . . but, only 40% expected to. The most common reason was lack of money. Thirty-five percent of the young people said they simply couldn't manage it financially.

Unfortunately many families wait until it's almost time for their children to enter college before they begin to make concrete plans for paying the costs. These days four years of college costs from $4,000 to $10,000 depending on the type of school and its location. A good average is probably around $4,000 to $6,000 for state institutions.

Families may be able to make the grade on a "pay-as-you-go" basis, but most would find the financing easier if it were spread over a period of time. It's not such a chore if you start saving when your child is born. For example, the family who buys a $25 Savings Bond each month (cost price $18.75) will find they have bonds worth about $5,600 by the time the youngster is 18 and ready for college.

But what if you haven't started your college fund? And maybe your child is already reaching primary school age? Don't let it get you down. You still have 12 years to go. Just step up your sights. Buy a $50 Savings bond each month. (It will cost just $37.50). And when college time rolls around, you'll have one education paid for . . . plus a good start on another for your second child.

If your children are already along in junior high or high school, start regular savings even though you know you can't save the complete price of a college education. Many times a financial base to start on coupled with a real desire to go to college is all the young persons needs to spur him on to make full use of his capabilities.

Some Convenience Foods Save You Money

You're saving money by using convenience foods such as frozen concentrated orange juice, canned chicken chow mein, and instant coffee, the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture reports.

Comparing the cost of convenience foods with the same dishes prepared in your own kitchen, department researchers found that 42 convenience items were less expensive and 116 were more expensive than home-prepared foods. But if you're a typical shopper, you buy enough of the money-saving items so your food bill is smaller than if you bought only fresh foods and prepared them yourself.

For each $100 you spend on food in the grocery store, 68c goes for frozen orange juice concentrate. An equal amount of fresh orange juice prepared in the home would cost $1.39. So, when you buy the concentrate you save 71c—and this does not include the value of the time you would have spent in squeezing the oranges.

You also make a sizable savings when you buy prepared chow mein, whether frozen or in the can. Frozen chicken chow mein costs 85 cents for 4 servings; canned chow mein costs 66 cents. But were you to make it yourself, these same 4 servings would cost $1.02.

Instant coffee, however was the biggest bargain among the convenience foods studies. Out of every $100 spent on food, $1 goes for instant coffee. Yet the same number of servings from regular coffee would cost you $1.96.

Among the higher priced convenient foods—in comparison with the do-it-yourself variety—were fresh ready-to-serve yeast rolls. They account for 10.6 cents out of every $100 spent on food, while the ingredients to make an equal quantity of these rolls on your home would cost only 3.4 cents.

Keep parsley fresh by covering in a jar with a small amount of water. Store in refrigerator.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Interested Property Owner

Due to the great influx of people to our town there seems to be a great need for more room at the elementary school.

There is going to be a meeting Nov. 29 at the school to discuss all of this. I hope the Citizens Building Committee will consider all aspects of the matter, especially in regard as to what it will do to the property owners taxes.

Our taxes increased $77.00 this year, $13.87 of that was for timber tax. We did no improving so the rest of the increase was for school and fire district. If the people of Mill City vote and pass to enlarge our Elementary School, who will pay the bill? The people who own property!

IN OREGON, every available steamboat was churning up the Columbia River, carrying prospectors to the gold fields in the Oregon Territory. But whether they found gold or just plain dust, Oregon's rugged pioneers knew they could always find delicious refreshment in a sparkling glass of beer.

For then as now, beer was the traditional beverage of moderation. But beer means more than enjoyment to Oregon. The Brewing Industry contributes more than a million tax dollars to Oregon each year—money that helps support our schools, hospitals and parks.

TODAY, in its centennial year, the United States Brewers Association still works constantly to assure maintenance of high standards of quality and propriety wherever beer and ale are served.
