IT'S YOUR LAW
Respect for Law Makes Democracy Live

PLAN AHEAD
Each of us may like to think of himself as indispensable. Without him the business, the office, the home would fall apart. This is often true, alas. People do suddenly become sick, cannot do their work, have a breakdown, or die. Who is to do this key man's work? Maybe only he can sign checks, open a deposit box, sign papers, or handle certain dealings. Some firms collapse in such an event. The law may dissolve partnerships and agencies at once, leaving partners with only power to wind up affairs. To take care of this, plan your business affairs. Write letters of instruction to banks, or other business houses, to take care of your affairs in emergencies. When a person dies, becomes incompetent, or unable to act legally, his affairs are suspended and a court names a legal representative to act for him. This takes time for a court hearing, notices, and other legal steps. Action taken after a representative's appointment often needs more time for court confirmation. To protect the interests of the person, the court must look over all new transactions unless he has provided otherwise.

The law has a special procedure to take care of a person's property if he suddenly gets hurt or becomes physically ill. The court may name a temporary conservator at once to take care of urgent matters and protect the sick or injured person from loss. It may name a permanent representative later.

Note: Oregon lawyers offer this column as a public service. No person should apply or interpret any law without the aid of an attorney, who is completely advised of the facts involved. Even a slight variance in facts may change the application of the law.

STRENGTH FOR THESE DAYS
I am with you... beholding your order.—(Cor. 2:5).
Try working with the thought of divine order. Try it when you need patience and poise; try it when you need to speak firmly but kindly.
