Safety Group To Meet on December 19

Mobile steel towers, and wire rope were main topics at the last North Santiam Safety Council meeting at the Last Frontier recently.

Noyes Whitten of Mill City, president, introduced the speakers for the evening, who spent most of their time talking about steel towers and showing where they are more safe than the old spar trees. Many questions were asked from the floor following the talks. Paul Davis who represented Skookum towers talked about the speed in which these towers could be erected on the job.

Dale Johnson of Robling Wire Rope and John Painter of Mack Whyte Wire Rope, both of Portland, talked about the use of their product. They explained that better service can be obtained in the use of wire rope if they are conditioned prior to taking the full "shock" of log loads. Lubrication is also of importance in getting more rope out of the rope.

Tony Schillingberg was introduced by Frank Muscutt of Timber Operators Council as the man replacing Robert Young, who is well known in this area. A film "Ten Minutes of Safety" showing how men and machines conquered the frozen north in establishing the Distant Early Warning line was presented.

The next meeting of the Safety Council will be held Wednesday, December 19.

Building Committee Gives Mill City Elementary Board of Education Green Light on Proposed School Addition

An information meeting was held at the Mill City Elementary school Thursday night when a committee of 30 citizens met with the Board of Education to hear why additional classroom space is needed now at the school. During the course of the meeting it was brought out that part of the school rooms had been divided into half size, or sub-standard rooms to take care of the influx of students when the Detroit dam was under construction. Larry Brent, superintendent stated: "We've had the school full ever since, and now we are gaining in population each year, and have no place to put the new students."

In a mimeographed letter sent to all citizens committee members, several alternatives to the new building were offered, all of which were deemed inadvisable by the group. On page six of this issue these alternate plans are printed in full so the public may be well informed as to what is going on.

The group did however, give the board the green light on advertising for a $115,000 bond election, which will be held on January 14 to finance the building of a six-room addition to the present school. Construction would be of masonry block to correspond to the present building and would include toilet facilities and a heating plant. This addition would include two eighth grade classrooms, two seventh grade classrooms and science laboratory, and a room which will most likely be needed within the immediate future. This additional room would be cheaper to build now than two or three years from now, was the consensus of the group. This bond issue would run for a 10-year period and would amount to a maximum of 4.1 mills for the first year, based on the present valuation and assuming that the bond interest rate would be 5%. Thereafter the rate would decline from year to year as the amount of interest to be paid decreases. When asked by a member how much that would amount to in dollars and cents, he was informed that it would run about $1.02 1/2 per $1,000 of true cash value for which the property is appraised. Thus for house of $10,000 value it would amount to about $10.25.

A blueprint of the proposed construction was presented by S. R. Haatvedt, an architect from the Portland area, who stated the plan had been approved by the Oregon Department of Education. There was some discussion that night on the possibilities of developing a junior high school and Supt. Brent said the proposed building would lend itself to use for a junior high school as all the rooms are in one compact area. What grades would be considered, whether sixth, seventh and eighth, or seventh, eighth and ninth were not discussed. This phase was not on the agenda for the Thursday night meeting, so discussion was limited. The architect also discussed the possibility of using a heat pump in the new addition. This would eliminate the need for a boiler room and may prove to be more economical, however this phase of the program will be studied further, before a definite decision is made.

A meeting has been set for January 9th when the program will be explained to the public.
