Loggers and Guests Hear About Safety

Loggers, mill owners and their guests heard about Home Safety and Civil Defense at the ladies' night meeting of the North Santiam Safety Council meeting.

Chairman Noyes Whitten introduced Tony Shillingburg of the Timber Operators Council who said their jobs was to make people "realize the necessity of being careful, not only on the job, but in the home. Most common cause of injury are falls."

Anthony Cardillo spoke on Civil Defense. He said their main purpose was to coordinate the action of all agencies in the case of emergency. He cited the fact of preparedness during the October 12 windstorm. He said civil defense did not have proper warning, so were caught unprepared. He stated all homeowners should be prepared at all times for emergencies. They should have equipment suitable for cooking, have lanterns and flashlights in working condition at all times. Those who have fireplaces should have wood cut, so they can keep themselves warm during time when power may be shut off.

"In case an atomic bomb drops on the west part of Oregon, Portland for instance, he admonished all residents not to panic, but to turn on their radios and find out which way the radioactive cloud is drifting so in case of evacuation, you will know which way to travel to get away from fallout. He said all families should have ample food on hand for at least two weeks, and more important is the supply of water for that period of time. Sanitation facilities are also a necessity. Those who do head for shelters should bring their own sleeping bags, air mattresses or other bedding to help out with their comfort.

After the Civil Defense talk, Mr. Shillingburg gave a demonstration on mouth to mouth artificial respiration, using a dummy to show the proper method to be used.

The next Safety Council topic will be "Power Saws, Falling and Bucking." At this time a film will be shown giving information which will be of interest to all persons connected with the lumbering industry.

Filters To Be Installed In Water Line

Pacific Power & Light company reports it plans the installation of pressure filters for the Mill City water system at a cost of $18,102.

The filters will help to clarify the city's water supply during the winter months when the high river flows result in a murky appearance of the water, reports Wayne Goin, PP&L's local area manager.

Four pressure filters along with associated equipment are on order and construction will begin as soon as they arrive, probably April 1, Goin said.

The filters will be housed in a prefabricated metal structure to be located adjacent to the present pumping facilities. The PP&L manager said the system has always maintained the highest standards of purity in compliance with the state health board's requirements and the turbid condition has been primarily a problem of the appearance of the water. The installation of the pressure filters between the pressure pumps and the storage reservoir will substantially reduce the murkiness of the drinking water supply, he said.

Detroit Boy Freezes to Death Mon.

Dale Guy Staler, 16-year-old Detroit High school sophomore was found dead Monday after a night spent on the rugged snow-covered slope of Dome Rock.

He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Bowman of Detroit and with a younger brother, Terry, 13, had gone on an impromptu Sunday hike.

Dale became exhausted and Terry left him to seek help, spending 21 hours in the below-freezing weather.

The boys spent the night together on Dome Rock, resuming their trek at dawn, but when Dale became tired, Terry went on the four-hour trip home by himself.

He led his step-father back to the spot where he had left Dale, but the boy was already dead.

The road was impassable for the Bowman car, but Robert Cokenour, a forest service employe, took them to where the boy was found.

Bowman said he and a friend had began a search for the boys Sunday night but had no idea where they had gone, and the search was centered in the Detroit reservoir area.

Forestry officials estimated a foot of snow lay on the north slope of Dome Rock in the area where the boys spent the night.

The youths were clad in jeans, wool shirts and jackets, but only low shoes for their mountain hike.

Dale was born in Wall Hill, Neb. and had been a resident of Detroit for two years. His survivors include his mother and step-father, a sister, Jane Staler of Detroit, another sister, Nancy Tomlison of Belton, Mo., brothers Terry, Detroit, and Jess Young, at Hickam Field, Hawaii.
