Baked Beans with Deviled Ham and Onions

Baked beans belong to the rare company of sure hits, and this special baked beans dish proves that cheerful fall over again.

In Baked Beans with Deviled Ham and Onions, for instance, the beans, pleasant, smiling, warm, are snuggled in rich sauce. And that sauce! It's meaty with chopped prunes . . . the new soft kind, tart-sweet and winery. It has chopped onions in it and deviled ham, mustard, tomato sauce and brown sugar. Slide the whole affair into the oven and let the beans quietly bubble in this lively mixture long enough for the sharp and fruity zest of the sauce to mingle and merge with the mellow flavor of the beans. Then onto the table go the beans, hot, brown, richly savory, and breathing deliciousness.

|---|---|
| 1 cup plumped, chopped* prunes (about 16) | 2 1-pound cans pork and beans in tomato sauce |
| 6 plumped prune halves— for garnish | 1 2 1/4-ounce can deviled ham |
| 3 tablespoons chopped onion | 1/4 teaspoon dry mustard |
| 1 1/2 tablespoons butter or margarine | 1/2 cup tomato sauce |
| | 1/4 cup brown sugar |
| | 1/4 cup onion slices |

Saute cut-up prunes and onions in butter or margarine in skillet over low heat until onions become transparent, about 5 minutes. Pour beans into medium-sized bowl. Add sauteed prunes and onions, deviled ham, mustard, tomato sauce and brown sugar. Stir well. Pour into 1 1/2-quart buttered casserole. Place onion rings on top of beans. Also arrange prune halves, cut side down, on top. Bake in hot oven, 400 degrees, 40 to 45 minutes, until hot and bubbly. Makes 5 to 6 servings.

*The easiest way to "chop" prunes is to snip the meat from the pits with kitchen shears.

Strawberry Harvest Now in Full Swing

Oregon strawberry fields are expected to yield 79 million pounds of berries this year, a shade above average but down seven percent from last year's harvest. Local growers report harvest in full swing, and the crop of good quality. Doug Heater of Fern Ridge said the yield would depend upon the weather during the harvest season.

OSU economist Stephen C. Marks, said the figure is based on the June 1 crop conditions and U. S. Department of Agriculture estimates. The prediction for Oregon is the same as in May, although the June figure for the nation as a whole was reduced, he noted. The USDA now expects a total of 492 million pounds for all season strawberry groups. This is 23 million pounds less than 1962 production.

Nearly all of the state's strawberries are produced for processing, Marks pointed out. In 1962, growers sold only 4.4 million pounds on the fresh market out of a total production of 85.4 million pounds. The weather is the key to this year's crop, Marks said. Like last year, harvest started late. However, in 1962, weather favorable to strawberries continued through June and into July lengthening the season and upping production. A sudden prolonged hot spell could reduce the 1963 harvest time.

The bulk of strawberries usually produced for processing shifted from California to Oregon last year. Oregon accounted for 81 million pounds or 36 percent of the United States total of some 226 million pounds of berries for processing, Marks said.

Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Hutchinson and Vernon left Wednesday morning for several days at the coast. They recently purchased a new camper and are giving it a "trial run."
