IT'S YOUR LAW

Respect for Law Makes Democracy Live

THE KNOWLEDGEABLE WIDOW

Sit back and take a good look at all you have done: You've given your family a home, security, and many luxuries. For them you want the best now and tomorrow. And even after you are gone. So, most likely, you've already drawn up a will to save on death taxes. Perhaps you've put some funds in trust for certain purposes.

Even so, you can't do all your family's thinking for years to come. You have to equip them, especially your wife, to manage their own affairs.

Refresh your wife on your business—what you own; how you regard it; who your associates are, and whom to look to for facts and advice. In this way you can keep her from some mistakes.

Tell your wife how you pay the bills, keep records, and pay your taxes. Tell her especially who advises you on these matters. Tell her about insurance, trust funds, stocks and other investments. Show her the papers and where you keep them. And why.

Show her how you bought the house and car.

See that she meets your lawyers, bankers, and business associates.

Does she know enough about your business and whom you deal with? She may have to take it over and run it or sell it.

Take her to your office; show her where you keep the books, vital papers, letters, checks, and receipts.

Does she know how to file her tax forms and whom to consult about taxes?

Take her through your business papers. Perhaps while you are around to supervise, you ought to let her have a trial run or two in some transaction to give her skill, knowledge, and confidence.

Market Outlook Mixed for Logs, Lumber and Cones

The open market for logs in Western Oregon is beset by a number of uncertainties, but appears generally favorable for the next six months with demand expected to remain fairly high.

This is the outlook as seen by C. F. Sutherland, Oregon State University extension forest economics specialist, in the new Oregon Farm and Market Outlook. Copies of the outlook circular are now available from county extension offices.

Housing economists predict that construction during the remainder of 1963 will match the pace set in 1962 when builders erected almost a million single family dwellings, he said.

Canadian competition continues to be a primary factor affecting Oregon lumber and log prices, he noted. In the first four months of 1963, Canadian softwood producers shipped 1.3 billion board feet of lumber into the United States to mark a gain of 1.6 percent over the year-ago level.

all construction materials used in Canada may shift more of that country's lumber into the export trade, Sutherland warned.

The October blowdown continues to hang over the industry as owners push to beat insects to the affected areas. Paradoxically, Sutherland said, the labor dispute may actually improve the market for the small owners' timber. The strike has pushed prices for lumber and plywood higher and shifted production to the small mills which are always more active in the open market for logs.

Hardwoods will probably continue to move well in most Western Oregon counties, Sutherland said. Furniture sales have been excellent and are expected to approach 1962, a record year in the industry. Hardwood lumber producers have been pressed to find an adequate supply of high quality logs to meet the demand for alder and maple furniture stock, he noted.

Prices for Douglas fir seed should be fairly high this year since supplies will be scarce, he continued. Commercial seed buyers and OSU geneticists forecast a very poor crop of Douglas fir seed in Northwest Oregon this fall.

Low production of female cones plus poor pollination because of a wet-cold spring reduced production and insects have attacked much that remains, he reported.

A strong market is expected next fall for high quality Christmas trees, particularly for cultured Douglas fir. A ready market should also be available for grand fir and Oregon shore pine.

The major markets for Oregon producers will continue to be in California, although the Portland area will provide an important outlet for many producers, Sutherland said.
