Suggestion for a late summer weekend trip would have to include one of Oregon's famous mountain passes. Across the Cascades, for example, via Mt. Hood Loop on Highway 26, or the North Santiam on Highway 22; the McKenzie Pass on Highway 126, or perhaps Highway 58 over the Willamette Pass.

Scenic interest along these mountain routes includes panoramic views of towering Cascade peaks, sparkling mountain lakes and streams, mighty stands of timber affording coolness to woodland recreation

Useful Workshop Ideas

Firewood Carrier

With this adjustable sling you can carry six to eight pieces of firewood like you carry a suitcase. Groove the wooden handle for two hooks to which one end of each chain is attached. In use the sling is laid on the ground and loaded at its center. Then the loose ends are slipped on the handle hooks. To grip the load tightly the chain can be attached several links from the end.

Hanging Trellis

Roll up this trellis for winter storage and hang it on a wall for annual climbers. Five equal lengths of lightweight chain are stretched between two spreaders. Four long screwhooks or opened eyebolts are screwed into the wall at points indicated. Use screw anchors on masonry walls. Top spreader is hung on screweyes and lower spreader is pulled down by turnbuckles or coil springs so chain will be taut. S-hooks slip over the lower spreader and attach to the turnbuckles which slip on lower screweyes. Eyes of turnbuckles may need reaming. If spreaders slip out of place on screweyes and S-hooks, a shallow file mark or a dent in the tubing will keep them in place.

areas and, of course, the smashing beauty of flaming leaves as foliage turns to hues of yellow, red, lavender and gold to welcome the fall season.

For something to do, the Cascade passes offer some of the finest camping, picnic and recreational facilities in the world—provided by state and federal parks. The wild huckleberries are ripe in all reas. There'll be about another 10 days of picking. Early morning and late evening angling has been excellent in lakes and streams. This time of year, these high mountain playgrounds are a good place to evade the heat and find exciting family recreation. Heat? What heat? Oh, well, why not be optimistic—I hear the atomic test truce is going to improve the weather. Enough of that!

OTHER PLACES in the state—Oregon State Fair which runs through September 7. It includes horse-racing daily except Sunday, nightly stage review, horse show, exhibits and many other special events.

IN SEPTEMBER—The annual Yaquina Art Center Show is slated for Newport on the 7th and 8th; Wheatley Elks Memorial Golf Tourney at Gearhart on September 8 and, golf again, it's the Oregon Professional Golfers Association tournament at Meriwether Country Club in Hillsboro.

Three more big events, any one of which might be fun to attend during next week are the Pendleton Round-Up and Happy Canyon Pageant opening Wednesday, September 11 and roaring through Saturday; Sherman County Fair and Rodeo at Moro, and the annual "Indian Style" salmon bake at Depoe Bay on Saturday, September 14.

Who said there's nothing to do this weekend? Roads throughout the state are in excellent shape, weather seems to be moderating, and school starts soon, so you'd better get out and enjoy yourself while you have a chance.

HEARD THAT Miss Oregon, D'Ann Fullerton, will appear on "To Tell the Truth" in New York City. Taping took place August 30, and the show will be televised September 6 on Channels 3, 5 and 6. Miss Oregon is planning to present M-C Bill Collier with an Oregon Welcome banner and greetings from Governor Mark Hatfield of Oregon.

HARD TO BELIEVE, but did you know Oregon's out-of-state tourist business brings a total of around $217 million into the state each year? We had close to 12 million visitors in 1962. And that's not all—right here in the state, we spent $184 (in fact, almost $185) million during the same period.

Our tourist business is the state's third-largest industry, and running hard for second place. The Oregon Welcome Committee is a volunteer committee assisting the Travel Information Division of the Oregon State Highway Department in tourist promotion activities. Oregon Welcome chairmen have been appointed throughout the state by Governor Hatfield, and this year's program, according to Dick Turner, chairman of the committee, has been highly successful.

Everyone can help in this program. Just greet our visitors with a big smile and warm handshake. Be friendly and helpful—make them feel at home.

Most favorite casserole and meat mixtures freeze well. Remember to:

1. Freeze them slightly under cooked.
2. Avoid excessive fat in the sauce to be frozen.
3. Plan to use them within a month.
4. Package in small blocks or separate layers for quick, uniform reheating.
5. Avoid freezing hard cooked eggs, raw celery, fresh tomatoes, large chunks of potatoes and excess spices.
