IT'S YOUR LAW

Respect for Law Makes Democracy Live

FREEDOM OF THE PRESS

Can a judge hold a newspaper editor in contempt of court if the editor severely criticizes the judge for deciding a case as he did? Could a district attorney bar a reporter from the courthouse because the reporter wrote an unfavorable account of the way the office was run? Not in this country.

The right of freedom of the press is secured by the first amendment to the Federal Constitution, which says, "Congress shall make no law . . . abridging the freedom of . . . the press." The Constitutions of the several states likewise contain similar guarantees.

Why did the farmers of New England, the planters of the South and the small storekeepers of Philadelphia, New York, and Boston insist some 160 years ago that the original Constitution be amended so that the people would be specifically guaranteed freedom of the press?

It was because the founders of our country had an abiding faith that enlightened citizens could be entrusted with the job of governing themselves. If they could have an unfettered opportunity to read the history and to learn the lessons of the past, to understand the never-ending clash of ideas, to read about what forces are alive in the world, to check on their government as to its activities, its successes, its failures and its abuses, and to write and speak unimpeded—then they could not be made slaves.

The framers of the Constitution believed that freedom of the press would aid in enlightening the people. The competition of ideas would point out the choices of the people. With this freedom, they could decide their own problems better, with more resulting happiness to themselves, their families and their communities.

Of course, all rights entail correlative obligations and duties. Freedom of the press is not unlimited. It does not permit license, libel, violation of the law, nor interference with the orderly running of the government.

With but a few insignificant exceptions, the press of the free world has admirably justified the faith of the philosophy of the framers of the Constitution. Through the Western Hemisphere, and in the free countries of the Old World, the "fourth estate" has fearlessly accepted its responsibility and has aided in preserving freedom and in checking tyranny and dictatorship.
