RAMBO'S RAMBLINGS

By Goldie Rambo

Last Friday I wrote a column—and after letting it "cool off" until Monday I filed it in No. 13! After rereading it didn't think things could be that bad—as long as I was walking and breathing.

Anyhow I got it out of my system—and no one the worse for it.

Thursday was both a day of frustration and pleasure—took a very special friend of mine to town—and a visit with her is always an uplift. But I forgot my glasses—Mrs. McGoo????? Price always have to shop the price tags—and the fine print eluded me so all those wonderful specials didn't get added to my charge accounts which no doubt pleased my husband.

I have had one good merchant in town tell me he is going to buy me a pair of glasses—I need two pair, dear boy!

Was fitted with a pair of trifocals which drove me nuttier than usual—so THAT is why I am always looking for the blame things—can't see part of the world with them on and can't see the other part with them off.

Speaking of looks and seeing and so on—women go a lot on the latest fashion in style and hairdress, or a great majority try to. Well, I can tell you one thing that ISN'T what makes people really notice you (or at least remember you) and certainly doesn't make for charm.

There is one gal in town who A L W A Y S gets a second glance of admiration from men—her skirts are a little long, her shoes aren't pointed toe, her hair isn't coiffed in the latest style—but she is a very charming person. Of course if you have that and style too—lucky you.

I am taking a load of JAYVEE Cheerleaders to town this week—for their second trip. I could write a book how fussy the kids are on what they wear and the high prices they pay for the items. It seems to me that they should be thinking more about putting their energy in school spirit. It makes it real tough for the girls that would like to go out for cheerleader but the cost prevents them.

Well—I better get off that subject before I have my daughter in my hair. It probably embarrasses her when her mother speaks frankly—although she should be used to that after all these years.

P.S. I do want to put in a word here—took the trip and survived and want to say they are, on the whole, a pretty nice bunch of kids—with "good heads" under that "back combed" exterior.
