Work Smarter . . Not Harder

The next two weeks should find shoppers exclaiming with delight when they reach the produce section of their favorite markets. Cantaloupes will be a really big item, but other high-quality fruits will be there, too—watermelons, nectarines, red haven peaches, Santa Rosa plums, Tilton apricots, Oregon-grown raspberries, strawberries, and Bing and Lambert cherries.

Thompson seedless grapes, California grapefruit, Valencias, the juice oranges, avocados and bananas will be right there, too. Few would object to having fruit three times a day, and right now it will be easy to find something to fit each meal, and for snacks as well.

Make Picnic Easy for Mother—Whether the choice is poultry, salmon, lamb, beef, or hot dogs, keep down the workload so everyone can enjoy the leisure time, including Mother. How to do it? Use processed foods. Northwest and national food processors have so many high-quality foods to offer that selecting several to round out a meal is all pleasure and little preparation. It's so easy to use foods that the canners have already chopped, pared, peeled or cooked, or that the freezers have brought to the final step for dropping into the saucepan, popping into the oven, or simply thawing and serving.

A marinated salad with green, yellow, and red beans layered with thinly-sliced salad onions and green peppers is popular fare. A corn pudding or scalloped corn and green beans in a heavy casserole makes a good hot dish. A bean pot filled with canned pork and beans, and seasoned with onions cooked in butter, pineapple chunks and prepared mustard is a quickly-prepared picnic treat. And don't forget the jar of pickles! A fruit gelatine made ahead makes a refreshing dessert—add a few fresh berries, sliced bananas or orange sections to your favorite canned fruits to lend flavor or texture contrast.

Other desserts: it doesn't take long to bake a fruit pie or to bake a cake from a mix.

Fruit juices and punch, chilled and poured right from the can, and frozen concentrates to combine with water, are always hits with children and adults, too. Maraschino cherries and fresh mint leaves make good garnishes. A bubbly beverage is chilled cranberry juice cocktail, apple juice and frozen lemonade concentrate, with ginger ale added, just at serving time.

Lucky is the homemaker who keeps convenience foods on hand for holidays and all days.

If you're really dissatisfied with the amount of work you get done in a day, take a good look at how you are doing it. Do a little brain storming on possible alternatives. Then try some new methods.

If you're doing a job the same way you did five years ago, it's probably obsolete. Your family has changed, your needs may be different. Everybody does things as a matter of habit and we all need to take a look and see what's really necessary.
