Plan ahead, Dad,

As every parent knows, a college education is generally required these days for the young man or woman seeking to enter the business world. Who can foresee what the demand will be five or ten years from now? We can only judge by the past and prepare accordingly. College costs have been increasing steadily, doubling in the past ten years. Saving ahead is about the only way the average family can be sure of providing their children with this opportunity. Is saving part of your plan, Dad?
