Up and Down The Avenue

By Don Moffatt

Once in a while it is nice to write about something pleasant, and this week I have the opportunity. Also in this day and age, when most of the news about young people has a negative slant, when we find good points it is a pleasure to bring them out. This spring, two Mill City young fellows, Jimmy Rose, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Rose, and Steven Bohach, son of Mrs. Nancy Bohach are doing their share in the beautification program of Mill City. On their own, they have rigged up their bicycles and are picking up debris around town—even under the Mill City bridge. This requires quite a bit of their time, but to what better advantage can young people use their after school hours than this. It keeps them busy, and at the same time, they are beginning at an early age to accept the responsibility of being good citizens, and their example could well be followed by many others in our city and nation. If everyone would do his share, it wouldn't take long to make this a better world to live in. Bud Cline of Mill City Disposal has agreed to pick up all the materials the young men gather, free of charge.

A new high in something or other occurred this past Sunday in New York. It seems that the National Black Economic Development Conference, a militant negro organization is demanding that the churches give them $500 million in reparations by white churches and synagogues. What a lot of tommy rot, and just who do they think they are that they can demand anything from the churches or anyone else. They have nothing coming but an equal chance to make their mark in the world, just the same as we white folks, or any other race of people.

James Forman, leader of the group disrupted services Sunday at famed Riverside church in New York. He pushed past ushers and read the list of demands. Forman is an officer of the Student Non-violent Coordinating committee. Among the demands is rent-free office space in the church, unrestricted use of the church's phone and radio station, and classrooms, and 60 percent of the church's income from stocks and real estate.

How come this person could march into a church and disrupt the services without being put in his proper place. Where were the police, or were they not called to put this agitator in the cooler. Until the time comes when this type of thing is squelched, we'll be in bad trouble.

The same goes for our colleges. The sooner we get administrators who are tough enough to meet this thing head on, the better. If we don't we will lose everything this country stands for. Colleges are not the place to air racial troubles. It is supposed to be a place of learning. Colleges have rules to abide by, and if they are continually broken, and if the demands of these trouble-makers are continually met, there is little hope for the institutions of higher learning in this country.

Indeed these are sad times. It would appear that letting these minorities cause all this trouble is a case of the tail wagging the dog. We need none of this now, or ever.

Asked how they happened to start doing it they said, "We just noticed how trashy some of the streets and walks in town looked and decided to do a little picking up." However, it has developed into quite a project with the youngsters gathering over 400 cans and bottles up until the time the picture was taken. Jimmy is a 6th grader and Steven a 4th grader in the Mill City grade school. Bud Cline of the Mill City Disposal has been picking up the debris free of charge—The Mill City Enterprise photo

Work Nearly Done On PP&L Water Plant

A $21,000 project to revamp and modernize Pacific Power & Light Company's water filtration plant in Mill City is nearly completed, except for a few finishing touches.

John Kohls, PP&L local manager in Stayton, reported that a new treatment plant control house and a raw water pumping shed have been completed by Raymond Lillie and Son construction crews. Work is now underway to paint the exterior and interior and to make the final electrical connections.

The remaining wood frame equipment building will be painted at the same time to blend in with the new modern structures, the manager noted.

Kohls said that the original wood frame buildings were replaced with the two new fire-proof concrete structures because they were inadequate to house PP&L's expanded modern pumping and water filtration equipment.

Included in the new 943 square foot concrete structures are a separate chlorine room and a chemical storage area.
