LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

August 13, 1969

Dear Mr. Moffatt
In recent issues of the Enterprise you have been extolling the virtues of cutting off government spending in the space program in order to finance the problems here in the United States, in the cities, ghettos, etc. If the government were to discontinue this space effort where do you propose for the men and women who are presently working for NASA, its contractors and subcontractors and associated other industries, to go get new jobs?

Certainly there is not enough work for them to do in the civilian world, so where will they go? They would have to take jobs that would be below their educational capabilities and therefore take jobs that others, with lower educational levels, would have had. Then these people that were displaced must find other employment thus displacing someone else and eventually those people near the bottom of this employment ladder would be hard put to find a job. Some of these people would have no job at all and therefore would go on the welfare rolls and we would be right back where we are now only worse. So why not let the space program continue, it provides jobs for many thousands of people and the salaries that they are paid go into the economy and others get use of it. Also another by-product of the space program is the advanced technological processes that are originally developed solely for the space program but that later prove to be valuable in the civilian world. The research and development of these ideas are paid for by the government thus saving private business world large amounts of time and money.

Another point that you brought up in your latest "Up and Down the Avenue" (August 14) is that you wish that taxes be lowered by the same percentage of your proposed deduction of government spending. Do you really think that this tax reduction will solve all of your problems? Maybe you don't really know what the purpose of the present high taxes (and surtax) is. I would hate to think that this is the case but evidently that is the case. You seem to hold the ultra-conservative (and antiquated) view that the only reason for taxes are to finance government spending. Do you realize that if taxes were reduced, thereby giving you more disposable income, prices would rise to a level higher than the tax reduction percentage? If you have ever studied the President's Economic Report (it would cost you only $1.25 through the U. S. Gov't Printing Office) you would see that the real reason for the present high rate of taxes is to keep inflation and its effects to a minimum.

Sincerely,
Robert Avery

It's Your Law

Respect for Law Makes Democracy Live

LANDOWNER'S LIABILITY
Frank had been in an accident and felt that he should be able to recover damages from the driver of the other car. He went to see lawyer Jones.

Jones discovered while Frank was telling his story, that the driver of the other car was insured by a company represented by Jones.

As soon as Jones learned this fact, he stopped Frank from telling him any more about the accident.

"I can't represent you, 'Jones said' since I represent the insurance company." He said he owed it to Frank not to hear anything from him which might be used against him if the case went to court.

This situation illustrates one of the basic principles in the ethics of the legal profession. A lawyer cannot represent conflicting interests. Basically, this is the legal profession's way of phrasing the old axiom that a man cannot serve two masters. A lawyer's duty is to do his best for his client. He cannot do that if there is a conflict between the interests of two of them. The reasoning behind this rule is that a lawyer should not appear in court representing both sides in a lawsuit.

If attorney Jones is practicing together with several partners, he must be careful not only of avoiding a conflict of interest between the clients he is serving, but between his clients and other clients of his partners as well.

As far as Jones is concerned, any client of his partners is his client.

(Oregon lawyers offer this column as a public service. No person should apply or interpret any law without the aid of an attorney who is completely advised of the facts involved. Even a slight variance in fact may change the application of the law.)
