September Heralds Bird Seasons

Upland bird hunters will have a full month of gunning ahead of them. September 1, heralded the opening of the statewide dove and pigeon season. Shotgunners will also have a short two-day season this month for the taking of sage grouse and 23 days to hunt blue and ruffed grouse.

The dove and pigeon season is scheduled through September 30. Bag limit is 10 doves daily, 20 in possession, and eight pigeons daily or in possession.

The sage grouse season will be this Saturday and Sunday, September 6 and 7, with the open area taking in Crook, Deschutes, Lake, and Harney counties, and that part of Malheur County south of Highway 20. All other areas of the state are closed to hunting sage grouse. Bag limit is two birds.

Hunters will get their first shot at blue and ruffed grouse in eastern Oregon on September 6 with the season extending through September 28. The bag limit is 3 grouse daily, 6 in possession. Western Oregon does not open to grouse hunting until October 4, with the season in this area running concurrently with the general west side deer season through October 26.

Biologists of the Game Commission expect dove hunters to find some good wing shooting in the grain-producing areas of the Willamette Valley and through the Rogue and Umpqua basins. Best bet, however, will undoubtedly be in the grain fields of eastern Oregon as well as the rimrock and juniper canyons, the juniper flats around Maupin, the Ashwood area to the east of Madras, the Burnt and Powder River drainages, and through most of Lake, Harney, and Malheur counties.

Mineral springs down through the Willamette Valley will draw most of the pigeon hunters, although coastal tide flats have many followers. Biologists also recommend pigeon flyways in both the coastal and Cascade slopes. Fine shooting is also available on elderberry slopes, favorite feeding areas of the bandtails. Specific locations where hunters will be assured success on sage grouse are difficult to pinpoint, say biologists, since these big upland birds move about regularly and distribution is so widespread. Hunters should look for the short sage country in the open flats and rolling slopes.

The Blue and Wallowa mountains are the main haunts of grouse in eastern Oregon, with the blues found mainly on the ridgetops and the ruffed grouse in the brushier stream bottoms and side canyons.

Some good shooting is predicted in the Innaha area, Chesnumus, Sled Springs, and the Umatillas. If hunters can find the right ridges, they can expect some good hunting also in the timbered areas of the Burnt, Powder, and John Day drainages.
