Tuberculosis Tests Now Simplified

The X-Ray unit which has made X-rays available at a minimal cost for the past 10 years at Salem General Hospital is being removed.

"Development of newer techniques in tuberculosis detection have made this old unit, with its 4x5 pictures, obsolete," explained Robert V. Bain, M.D., in announcing the decision. Bain is president of the Board of Directors of the Willamette Tuberculosis and Health Association, which purchased the unit to aid in tuberculosis case detection in 1959.

"The lower rate of tuberculosis in Oregon in recent years has made mass chest X-ray screening less useful as a tool to detect tuberculosis," Bain said. "Health authorities and tuberculosis associations are abandoning the use of miniature chest X-ray units such as the one at Salem General Hospital, because they no longer have a place in the fight against tuberculosis."

Another of the units, purchased for Salem Memorial Hospital, ceased operation in 1967.

"Most area residents who have taken advantage of this inexpensive service for a yearly TB checkup can simply switch to a TB tine test (skin test)," Bain said. He quoted William R. Murlin, M.D., director of the Tuberculosis Section, State Board of Health:

"The skin test is an accurate, up-to-date method of identifying positive reactors to tuberculosis."

The TB tine test is available to the public at no charge at county health departments and can also be obtained at private physicians' offices.

US Army Engineers Have Film Available For Showing

"Control of the Columbia" is a new documentary film produced by the North Pacific Division, U. S. Army Corps of Engineers, and released this week for showing to service clubs, school groups and general audiences.

The film, which is 16 mm., color and runs for 20 minutes, depicts how automated control equipment at Columbia Basin dam projects of the Corps, Public Utility Districts, Private Utilities and the Bureau of Reclamation is used to control reservoirs for maximum flood control, power, irrigation, navigation, water quality and other benefits.

The Reservoir Control Center of the Corps and the River Forecast Center of the U. S. Weather Bureau with the aid of a high-speed digital computer coordinate river flows to attain the greatest benefits to all users of the Columbia Basin waters. It was this system of controls which kept the Willamette to relatively minor damage in the 1964-65 flood and reduced the high water stage at Vancouver by six feet during the 1969 runoff session.

Groups interested in showing the film may request it from the North Pacific Division office in Portland or from the Corps' District offices at Seattle or Walla Walla.

Hatfield Backs Golden Eagle Deal

Senator Mark O. Hatfield, co-sponsor of the Bill to extend the Golden Eagle Passport, announced today that the Bill is out of his Interior Committee and is now before the Senate.

The Passport program allows unlimited visits to national parks and recreation areas upon payment of an annual fee. The Bill before the Senate would extend this present widely used permit for use of Federal camp and recreational facilities.

"I have many indications of wide and broad support for this Bill in the Senate," Hatfield said.

"I'll continue to work on behalf of any Bill of this type because we should encourage family activities and do all we can to help those on fixed incomes," Hatfield said.

Linn Co. Planning Commission To Hold Meeting Series

In order to more effectively plan for the future, the County Court has recently appointed 15 Zoning Advisory Committees who will study the planning and zoning of Linn County and make recommendations to the Linn County Planning Commission.

Each committee is composed of about 10 lay citizens and represents one of fifteen areas in the county: Albany, Brewster-Lacomb, Central Linn, Dever-Corner-Millersburg, Harrisburg, Highway 34, Kingston, Knox Butte, Lebanon, Lyons-Mill City, Plainview, Riverside, Scio-Crabtree, Sweet Home-Foster-Holley and Tangent-Oakville.

A series of four areawide meetings has been scheduled for this month to inform these newly-formed committees about planning and zoning and their advisory role in these processes. Those meetings will be held on September 10 at the Central Linn High School cafeteria; September 11 at the Scio Centennial School; September 23 at the Lebanon City Hall Council Chambers and County Fairgrounds. All meetings will begin at 7:30 p.m. and last for two hours.

Agent reports.
 The course scheduled to start September 15 has been tailored to the needs of the young homemaker who needs all the information she can get to provide her family with wholesome, high quality, properly prepared meat at a cost that will fit her budget. The lesson will without doubt prove helpful to the more experienced homemaker who would like a refresher course in identifying cuts of meat, cooking methods suited to each and recipes that will enhance selected cuts of beef, pork, lamb and poultry. Since meat accounts for at least 25% of the average family food bill this should be an important course for Linn and Benton County homemakers.

Homemakers may call the Extension Office for further information or to add their names to the list of registrants. Send name, address and zip code to the Linn County Extension Office, P. O. Box 765, Albany, Oregon 97321 or telephone 928-9323.
