New Rules For Anglers Now Ready

Oregon anglers are advised that the 1970 angling regulations booklets are now available at all license agencies.

Angling regulations are set by the Game Commission on a calendar year and the new rules contained in the booklets will be effective from January 1 through December 31, 1970.

Several changes in the regulations will be of interest to salmon and steelhead fishermen. Foremost is the 40 aggregate season limit on salmon and steelhead instead of the 20 salmon and 20 steelhead as in previous years. The 40 fish season limit applies to all waters west of the Cascades and the Columbia River downstream from Bonneville. Anglers in the upper Columbia and eastern Oregon waters are still limited to the 20 salmon and 20 steelhead for the year.

Also, salmon anglers fishing the Willamette River from Oregon City downstream are allowed 3 salmon daily where last year they were allowed only 2. This new regulation for the lower Willamette now coincides with the 3 salmon daily limit in all tidewater areas.

Two new lakes are open to year-round trout angling beginning January 1. These are Hills Creek and Agate reservoirs. Green Peter Reservoir also opens to trout angling January 1 but this impoundment will close with the regular trout season October 31. The trout bag limit at Green Peter from January 17 through April 17 is five trout per day, 10 in possession.

The fish-for-fun rule on sturgeon in the Snake river is now in effect so anglers fishing for these fish must return them to the river unharmed. The daily trout bag limit on the Snake is also reduced to 10 fish six inches and over (not in zones 5 and 6).

Several deadline changes were made on winter steelhead waters and anglers should check these out carefully. The Game Commission also reminds outdoorsmen that 1970 hunting and angling licenses are now needed.

Disabled Veterans Must Answer Questionnaires

Veterans and dependents receiving Veterans Administration pension checks have until January 15 to return the income questionnaires mailed with their October checks, C. J. Griesmeyer, Manager of the Portland Veterans Administration Regional Office, said today.

Several thousand questionnaires have not yet been returned.

The January 15 deadline applies to veterans who are totally and permanently disabled by disease or injuries not associated with their military service, and wartime veterans' widows who draw pensions from the Veterans Administration, if they have limited incomes.

In addition, parents of deceased veterans who receive compensation checks are required to return income and dependency questionnaires.

Since the amount of payment is related to income, the law requires beneficiaries to report their income so the Veterans Administration can determine the amount to which they are entitled during 1970.

Veterans, widows and dependent parents are reminded that they may receive information and assistance in completing their questionnaires from the Veterans Administration Regional Office.

STRENGTH FOR THESE DAYS
from The Bible
In quietness and in trust shall be your strength.
—(Isa. 30:15).

When something makes us miserable, make use of the power of affirmation. An affirmation of truth sets our thoughts and feelings in a new direction. We can make use of easy affirmations such as: "We shouldn't be upset, because God is in charge, and through Him we will be able to act intelligently and effectively to handle any situation."
