Up and Down The Avenue

By Don Moffatt

It is an easy thing for all of us to complain about action taken by our city council, the board of education, the volunteer firemen, and the many people who do other civic jobs without compensation. I suppose some people believe that members of the city council are paid for their services. This is not the case. All councilmen work for FREE and do their jobs to the best of their ability. They not only attend the regular and special council meetings, but they also have their commission appointments. I often think of the hours these men put in, working on solutions for us all. Have you noticed how many times you see Adolph Brunner, for instance, out around town, and with a shovel in his hands, giving an assist where needed in keeping our streets in repair? He does this without charge to the city. I think each of us should give a vote of thanks to all these men who take their jobs seriously. Maybe we don't agree with some of the things they do, but if we disagree, the best place to take our complaints is to the council meetings.

This is also the truth with the people who serve on the school board, or on the planning commission. Maybe we don't agree with them on all things, but let us not be too critical, unless we have a better solution to a problem, and unless we are willing to take on part of their responsibilities. And for FREE, remember?

I often think how lucky we are that we have a good volunteer fire department, too. Notice how quickly they respond when called? They, too, are working for us for free. What a great country we live in when we have citizens who are willing to give of their time to protect our property.

My wife informed me that she read where the headline is going to take a plunge soon according to the designers, who are always keeping women in a dither in an attempt to stay in style. She said the dresses and skirts may be lowered to the middle of the calf. Wow, what a drop that is. Worse than the market. I often wonder when they can hit a happy medium. I think that skirts are a little short right now. It leaves little to the imagination—but lowering the headline as far as suggested is a little ridiculous too, isn't it? It think the young people look all right in the shorts, but how about the older people, who just don't have the figure for it? It is tough for them. I know. It says don't "hide your light under a bushel," but then that also depends upon the size of the "bushel."

It would serve the designers right if all the women of the world would just tell them very sweetly to "go to hell." Then if that doesn't bring results, refuse to buy the clothing shown in the stores. That would really hit them where it would hurt most.

If you really want to foul up something in good shape, get a government agency to go to work on some plan. Each time a new bureau is formed—you can expect a bunch of people to be put on the payroll. And before you know it they have themselves involved in so much red tape that they lose sight of what they are trying to do. It seems that it takes a dozen or so people to handle the preliminary paper work on these projects at each level, and the more people hired, the more confused they all become. Consequently more rights are taken from people at the local level, and placed in the hands of people who haven't a chance to solve the given problem, no matter what it is.

I would like to see much of what is handled at the federal level returned to the states. One man I was talking with the other night thought that relief could be handled better

Seniors At Santiam After Scholarships

A number of seniors at Santiam High School have applied for scholarships this year. Fourteen are interested in four year institutions, both state and private. Two year community colleges appeal to nine seniors; several are applying at various business colleges; while nursing is the choice of one member of the class.

The Elks offer a scholarship to the outstanding senior student in Oregon. Five seniors have sent in applications. Another organization giving a scholarship is in the AFL-CIO. To qualify, the two students from Santiam who are applying must take a competitive examination.

This week information was received concerning a letter writing competition sponsored by the Pepsi-Cola Company. The letter is to be entitled "Why You've Got a Lot to Live". The winning Oregon entry will receive $1,000 and the national winner $10,000. No doubt as soon as the details are made known several seniors will enter this exciting contest.

Much of the information concerning which scholarships are available, as well as directions on how to fill out the often complicated application forms, are explained and discussed in a classroom situation. However, the final completion of forms usually takes place on an individual basis in the counseling office. At the present time, the seniors who have applied for scholarships are anxiously waiting for news concerning their applications.

Chemeketa Budget Is Defeated

Only three places in the four-county area voted in favor of a proposed budget to operate the newly-formed Chemeketa Community College.

Candalaria in South Salem, Santiam and Detroit Districts were the only ones to approve the $2.8 million tax levy which would have cost property owners $181 per $1,000 of true cash property value of the area affected.

Kracker Barrel To Move Soon To New Location

Mrs. Wilma Bungarner who owns and operates The Kracker Barrel store on Northwest Alder, said this week that she has received several complaints from people living down over the hill from her store in regard to trash throwing.

Mrs. Bungarner said she regretted the incidents; also rock throwing which has been engaged in by some youngsters in the area. These hit cars and houses on the street.

Mrs. Bungarner said that certainly all the trash did not come from her store, presumably scattered by children, and that she didn't condone the rock throwing. However, she stated "two wrongs don't make a right and I would like to apologize for the incidents and I will be moving my store to another location soon."

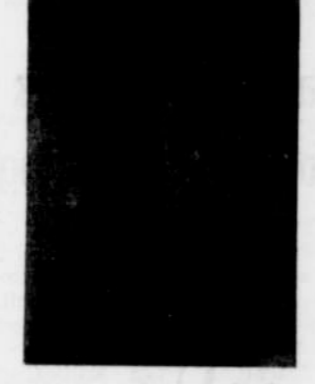

on the local level than at the national, state, or county level. It would be a lot tougher for a man who was not working, when a job was available and he was not disabled, to get on relief, if he had to meet with a local board, made up of local people, who would have first hand information on each individual case. Only trouble is with this system, who here in Mill City would like to serve on this board? It's most likely the most sensible approach, but we will never be able to get the funds sprung loose from the myriad of bureaus in Washington. One thing for sure, the relief program could do a lot more good for much less money.

He brought out many interesting points in his subject and stated that many times it is much more economical to consult an attorney to make a will, than to do it yourself. He answered questions for many of the members following his talk.

At present there are six girls taking shop. Five girls, Sharon Lunsford, Sharon Muise, Linda Oakland, Connie Sarff, and Marie Wright, are taking the first year of drafting.

The exposure to male oriented courses has given the girls a chance to accomplish skills that originally were designed for boys. This skill is quite readily received in offices such as the U. S. Forestry Department and other offices demanding the skill of drafting.

The other girl, Senior Linda Crowthers, is working in the shop and she has performed upon various large tools such as the wood lathe and is gaining a proficiency that will aid in home tasks of the future.

The school officials hope that in the future more girls will take an interest and enter the shop and drafting program.

Air Pollution Is Topic of Chamber Talk

Mike Roach of the Mid-Wilamette Valley Air Pollution Authority was guest speaker at the North Santiam Chamber of Commerce meeting at the Riverview in Mehama last Wednesday noon. He said the 1967 State Legislature had passed a law setting up regional areas in the state. This was adopted in 1968.

In his short talk he said that Linn County was rated No. 1 for having the worst pollution problem and that something will have to be done to clean up the air, not only in this county but in all counties in the state.

One Chamber member stated he felt the Pollution Authority should do something about cleaning up Eugene, Salem and Portland before they came up into this area, as we were not hurting in the Santiam Canyon. Roach informed the group, that in flying over the Canyon, there was a deep haze, and this was harmful for no other reason than the haze can lower the ground temperature as much as 11 degrees. He said this could alter the growth of crops, and if it gets worse, could change a lot of things.

He said it is up to the people to decide "how clean we want our air" and what steps will be necessary to reach goals that will lead to making the country more livable.

Roach said that summer is the worst time for air pollution. He did not have any answer for garbage disposal except using land fills. Some members feel that it is necessary to do more burning, rather than using land fill, as it eventually may pollute the land. He also felt that the lumber industry could comply with the Air Pollution Authority standards without causing them to close down. He did not give any specific yardstick to measure how much smoke they would tolerate in their compliance rules.

Home burning can still be done between the hours of 9 a. m. until 4 p. m., he said, but that permits are necessary. Over 30 were present at the meeting.
