American Flag Flies On Mountaintop Behind Ranger Station

DETROIT—A large American flag mounted on a snag high on a rocky peak behind the Ranger Station is still a puzzle as to who placed it there.

A spokesman at the Station said a couple of young men called at the Ranger Station a day or two before the 4th of July and asked about directions to the area. It is presumed they placed it there.

The flag was noticed by personnel at the Station flying high on the peak during the 4th of July holidays and it is still fluttering in the breeze.

The area is pretty rugged and dotted with many cliffs.
