Mother and Daughter Are United After 17 Years

By Jean Roberts
MEHAMA — A mother and daughter happily celebrated a reunion recently at the Dana Wilson home in Mehama after a separation of 17 years.

The daughter, Mrs. Kenneth Anderson of Salem, fled Hungary in 1956 during the revolt that year. She finally received permission for her mother, Mrs. Theresa Bereczky of Budapest, to come to the U. S. for a visit.

After a two-year exchange of notes, the acquisition of a passport and visa, and a round-trip ticket, the visit was further delayed until an American bank vouched that Mr. Anderson, superintendent of Parkett Logging Co., Mehama, could provide food for his mother-in-law for 45 days.

At the reunion, Mr. Anderson, speaking for her mother, who can speak no English, recalled the year she fled from Hungary. The Russians had invaded and two soldiers were stationed in each house in Budapest. "They were nice," she recalled, "but very ignorant. They had never seen bathrooms and used the water in the toilet bowl to wash their meat in preparation for cooking. When the toilet was accidentally flushed, the meat disappeared, so they named them "Stealing machines."

Mrs. Anderson also recalled that the Russians had never seen much jewelry so wristwatches became a status symbol. Each Russian soldier would wear several wristwatches on each arm if he could find them.

Mrs. Bereczky, who had never been out of Budapest before, is thoroughly enjoying her many "firsts": her first sight of the ocean, her first airplane flight, her first hamburger, her first stretch pants. When asked what impresses her most about America, Mrs. Bereczky replies, "the people." She is now awed by the number of cars and the lavishness of the American standard of living, but she is impressed by the friendliness of the American people. "This is the highlight of my life," she said. She has been invited to appear at several schools during her stay. Mrs. Anderson will translate for her. She can also exhibit two dolls she brought for her granddaughters, dressed in the Hungarian national costume worn for festivals and special occasions.

Mrs. Bereczky, 57, is retired but works part time in an aspirin factory. Workers in Hungary retire at the age of 55 and draw approximately one half of their original salary as social security. A worker's salary, however, according to Mrs. Bereczky, is only about $600 a month with prices almost the same as in America. Most people save for years to enable them to buy a TV or a radio. A tax is then levied on each of these luxury items. Houses in Budapest have cold running water but no hot water. Space is scarce, so new houses are required to be at least two stories high. The Bereczky house is a two-story house and houses four families. Each family has a kitchen and a bedroom.

The tree seedlings were hand planted by a six-man crew on a five-day a week work basis.

Some five-acres was planted by Boy Scouts in the Bruno-Mountain area, forester Mahlon Hale said.

The Forest Service annual summer crews are being assigned this week to various positions for the season. These include recreational and prevention guard duty, Engineering and Departmental assignments, suppression crew, brush crews (already at work) and other assignments in summer forest service work.

Some of the summer crews are made up of out of state college students, some of which return here annually for summer work.
