Notes from Hermit Hollow

By Rod Bart

Living in this beautiful Santiam Valley we are doubly blessed. We have the joy of looking on green mountains, and now the display of gleaming gold broom and wild iris. To thousands that visit us on the weekends and bring much needed business, they have but one or two days to enjoy this spectacle whilst we live surrounded by it all.

The opening days of May were ideal for the gardeners, and on a day I went to Albany, gardeners were bustin' out all over!

My main crops were all sown, and the March sown peas and Fava beans started putting on rapid growth. Then just when a few seedlings needed more than the watering can, good heavy showers came and I wondered whether my freezer was going to hold everything this year.

But my early morning round of inspection showed that there were visitors to the cauliflower patch so I put out two cottage cartons of beer as I'd heard of the great success of slugs enjoying a party and drowning in their drink. My slugs had a great party by the amount of beer consumed, washing down their stolen cauliflower leaves then returning home to seep it off. I wonder if I'd have more luck with inebriated worms to rid the moles from my garden?

With the delivery of two loads of sawdust, mulching between the rows and all over the flower beds has begun. However, I'm following a successful tomato growers' advice and waiting until the first tomatoes have set before mulching them as they like a warm soil until then to give early ripening.

Using fresh sawdust has its hazards in a garden and I shall have another soil test made by the Agricultural Extension Service. Last year they advised that lime at the rate of three tons per acre was all I needed and which I spread before rotting last fall. If the winter cover crop of rye is any indication, and two patches I left growing are six feet tall—where can I get suitable bean poles!

THE ANATOMY

When a man has a cap for his knee or a key for the locks of his hair can his eyes be called an academy because there are pupils there?

What jewels can be found in the crown of his head.

Who travels the bridge of his nose?

When shingling the roof of his mouth can he use the nails on his fingers and toes?

Can the crook on his elbow be sent to jail? If so what did he do?

Can he sharpen his shoulder blades? I'll be darned if I know. Do you?

If he wanted to grind the valves in his heart could he do it with the tools in his chest.

Can he tie a bow in the cord of his spine or would two bow-legs be best?

Can he sit in the shade of the palms of his hands. Or beat the drum in his ear?

Now if the calf of his leg eats the corn on his toe why not plant corn on the ear. (anonymous)
