• Transplantation of islets of Langerhans—small cellular masses necessary for the secretion of insulin—may one day improve the condition of many diabetics. Recent experimentation in rats, indicate the transplant procedure is feasible, though complicated and results in a significant modification of diabetes. Many questions still remain about human transplants, but at present this technique seems more encouraging than the transplanting of an entire pancreas. Human pancreatic transplants have been tried 24 times, and all have failed.

• There is something fishy about the current mercury scare, or so two recent studies suggest. At the very least, argues one, there is nothing new about mercury concentrations in the ocean. Experiments with fish preserved in museums show that there is no significant difference in mercury concentration between tuna caught 93 years ago and tuna just off the boat.

• A new danger in the taking of LSD has been revealed by a physician D. A. E. Inglis. His report in a national surgeon's magazine indicates the possibility that the drug constricts the blood vessels of the hands and feet severely enough to cause gangrene.

Kellys Return from Week in Hawaii

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kelly returned early this week from a week's vacation trip to Honolulu where they flew on their 40th wedding anniversary, April 10. They were feted with a special cake and champagne during the flight, and surprised again with a beautiful floral arrangement in their hotel room upon arrival, a gift of relatives.

Although there was some rain and quite a bit of wind, some days were beautiful and the Kellys enjoyed the ocean beach and a catamaran ride, as well as the many unique places to eat, and several entertaining shows, including those of Ed Kenney, the Mills Brothers, and a Polynesian review.

The spectacular view from the tops of some of the hotels at Waikiki were breathtaking, but worth the 30-story or more elevator ride, sometimes on the outside of the building. Chinese and Japanese cuisine were also very much enjoyed.

An unusual tropical storm hit the islands one evening, but it did no damage on Oahu, as it had on one of the other islands, and lasted only a few hours.

The Hawaii Calls radio broadcast was enjoyed following a luncheon one noon, with names and voices of several of the participants recognized.

It was found difficult to leave the 80-degree climate to return to the mainland, where it was still very cold in Seattle and Portland, but it was worth the holiday.

Drug, Alcohol Hearing Set

A special legislative committee of the Oregon Restaurant and Beverage Association will propose statute changes and new regulations dealing with wine distribution in Oregon at a public hearing at the State Capitol on Thursday, April 27.

The proposals will be made to Senator Ken Jernsted (R-Hood River) who heads the investigation of malt beverage and wine problems presently being conducted by the Interim Committee on Alcohol and Drugs. The hearing is set for 10 a. m., Room 20 of the State Capitol.

"The hearing is being held so the people in the beer and wine industry can have an opportunity to tell us what specific legislative changes they would recommend to update the statutes connected with the business of selling beer and wine," Jernsted said.

Jernsted was named earlier this year by Senator E. D. "Debbs" Potts, Chairman of the full Committee.
