Fishermen Hit Bad Weather Opening Day

DETROIT-The Upper North Santiam Canyon hummed with activity over the weekend when hundreds of anglers visited the area for the opening of trout season. Businesses were busy, despite the cool wet weather.

Delaying the opening of the season for a week didn't do much for the fishermen, weatherwise. There was both rain and snow in both lower and higher elevations. Snow on mountain passes made the going rough for those hauling trailers and boats over the mountain. Fish catches were cut because fishermen couldn't stay out in the cold weather for too long a period. There were more fishermen opening day at Detroit Reservoir than last year. Sunday was sunny, but on the cool side.

Idanha Rural Fire District ambulance was called to Detroit Lake State Park boat ramp at 9 o'clock Saturday morning. A young woman riding in a boat with two companions was overcome by breathing fumes from a portable camp stove she was using to keep warm. The ambulance was not needed since her companions had already removed her from the boat into the fresh air which soon cleared up her condition.
