Diamond Lake Is Used As Garbage Dump by Fishermen

If illegal chummers and beer and pop drinkers continue to dump their cans and bottles in Diamond Lake, fishermen at this popular angling spot may well be crowded right off the top of the water. At least the bottom will be so cluttered with debris, anglers will be fishing literally in a garbage dump.

In five small areas inspected recently by Game Commission scuba divers, beer cans and bottles topped the list of debris found, with chum containers second on the list. Broken fishing rods, rusty buckets and plastic gadgets took third, and unintentional litter such as anchors, sunglasses and unopened beer cans ranked next. No attempt was made to list miscellaneous small litter.

If just the material found in several places in the prime still-fishing area of the lake is expanded to include the total still-fishing area, this 30-acre portion contains debris totaling 480 chum containers and 465 beverage cans and bottles.

One area surveyed was out of the still-fishing area, representing mainly that of the trolling and fly-fishing portion of the lake.

If the data from this small area is applied to the remaining 2,963 acres, the bottom of the main body of the lake contains 7,500 chum containers and 44,500 beer and pop cans. Chumming substances most popular were sardines, tuna, cat food, corn, and cottage cheese. No attempt was made to count litter sunk into the mud but sludge with a broken fishing rod uncovered at least one piece of litter per four square feet in one popular still-fishing area.

CUT SPENDING TO LOWER TAXES

If there's one thing we Americans could agree on, it's probably this: All of us would like to earn more money, and we all know that our taxes are too high.

Yet, it goes against the grain for many of us when politicians talk about tax reductions by shifting more of the burden to the higher-income groups. More equitable taxation should be supported by everyone, but let's not kid ourselves that tax shifting will cost us less. There just isn't enough income in the higher brackets to bring much tax relief, even if the rates were made totally confiscatory.

Despite the oratory of some politicians, higher-income people do pay a large share of government costs. In 1970, 13 per cent of the nation's individual income tax returns were filed by people with incomes over $15,000 and this 13 per cent supplied 51 per cent of the total individual income tax revenue that year.

Rather than pursuing the hopeless quest for enough money from higher-income people to pay the growing costs of government, voters should remember that cutting federal spending is the sound and sensible way to open the way to reducing our tax burden.

North Tenmile Yields Trophy Bullheads

Want to catch some large brown bullheads? If you do, the Game Commission suggests you give it a go at North Tenmile Lake where these tasty game fish have grown to record size since the chemical treatment several years ago.

A recent creel check of two anglers on North Tenmile showed that in ten hours of fishing, the two anglers creel-ed 81 brown bullheads, with 61 of these running 12 to 18 inches in length. Sixteen of these ranged from 14 to 16 inches and three reached the 18-inch mark.

No weights were taken of these large bullhead catfish but undoubtedly, the larger ones would have tipped the scales at several pounds. All were taken on bait.
