Shotguns Legal Firearms For Deer Hunting
The Oregon Game Commission advised hunters that shotguns are legal firearms with which to hunt deer, providing the cartridges used are rifled slugs or buckshot in sizes #1 or larger.
Birdshot, BBs, and buckshot smaller than #1 are not legal. Deer are the only big game animal which may be hunted legally with shotguns.
On several public shooting grounds and refuges, hunters are required to use shotguns for deer hunting, with rifles being prohibited in these areas.
Included on the list are the Camas Swale, Fern Ridge, and Denman management areas and the William Finley Refuge. Deer hunters may use archery equipment on these areas, both longbow and crossbow, during authorized general seasons. In addition, deer hunters are required to use shotguns on Government Island.

'FOR WANT OF A NAIL... THE KINGDOM WAS LOST'
Despite predicted record registrations and voter turnout this Presidential Election year, a sizeable number of Oregonians still haven't received the message.
The message, of course, is that every single vote counts.
And too many people are shunning the opportunity to vote.
The Secretary of State's office is predicting a voter registration total of 1,168,000 when registrars across the state close their rolls late in the evening this Saturday, October 7. The all-time high significantly surpasses the 971,851 registered for the 1968 General Election.
But the increase in registrations gives those interested in government by citizen participation little cause to rejoice. If the predicted total becomes reality after Oct. 7, it will surpass total registrations for this year's Primary Election by barely more than 10,000. And this year's Primary balloting was discouraging to say the least.

In recent Presidential Election years, Oregon voters have turned out during the Primaries at a rate of between 70 and 72 per cent of those registered. Last May, a dismal 63.4 per cent of that record registration made the effort and cast ballots.

Actual turnout was larger than the percentage figures indicate because Oregon's voter registration polls are purged following Primaries. And the net figure purged between last May and the General Election will be in the neighborhood of 100,000. What this indicates is that people are registering in larger numbers. But they're not getting into the voting booth and casting ballots in the same proportion.

Many segments of the state's complex society are concerned about voter apathy. The U.S. Department of Commerce reports some 21,000 white-collar workers avoided the ballot box for one reason or another when Richard Nixon was elected President in 1968. This number of abstainers represented something in the neighborhood of seven votes per precinct back in '68.

And seven votes per precinct can make a big difference in the outcome of an election. Harry Truman in 1948 garnered his upset re-election to the Presidency primarily by capturing the key states of Ohio and California by a margin of something less than one vote per precinct.

Richard Nixon, in his first bid for the Presidency in 1960, lost the vital state of Illinois by less than one vote per precinct.

The historical importance of a single vote in vital elections is indeed impressive. But judging from the manner in which Oregonians avoid the polling booth, the record likely is of interest only to students of antiquity.

Nonetheless, that record includes facts such as:

In 1645, one vote gave Oliver Cromwell control of England.
In 1649, one vote caused Charles of England to be executed.

In 1776, one vote gave America the English language instead of German.
In 1839, one vote elected Marcus Morton governor of Massachusetts.

In 1845, one vote brought Texas into the Union.
In 1868, one vote reversed impeachment proceedings against Pres. Andrew Johnson.
In 1876, one vote changed France from a monarchy to a republic.

In 1923 one vote gave Adolph Hitler leadership of the Nazi party.
And in 1941, one vote saved Selective Service just 12 weeks before Pearl Harbor.

The list is long and in each case, one can't help but speculate what the course of history might have been—except for the casting of a single ballot.
In Oregon today, the restrictions against voting have been relaxed to an historical minimum. First, of course, you must register. And any U.S. citizen who will be 18 years old on election day is entitled to register. The only exceptions are those who are serving terms of probation, parole or imprisonment for conviction of a felony.

Many people do not realize the former residency requirement has been waived by law and "brand new" Oregonians moving to the state as late as this Saturday, October 7, can cast ballots a month later if they register on the day they arrive.

So this Saturday is the deadline to register. And registration can be accomplished at any county courthouse and with myriad deputy registrars at public buildings, banks, schools, department stores—and even shopping center parking lots.

The simple act costs no money and takes but a few seconds of the registrant's time. Registration, however, is not the problem haunting those who believe in the sanctity of the individual vote. Oregonians are registering just fine, thank you. But will they vote for the issues and candidates of their choice on November 7?

Again, the Secretary of State's office is not overly optimistic. There will be a record turnout in terms of numbers. That much seems certain. General Election turnouts in recent years have averaged 84.8 per cent of those registered. Officials estimate 85 per cent will ballot this year.

But unless candidates and issues engender more excitement than was created prior to this year's Primary, that percentage could be much lower.
That voter apathy should increase in Oregon is odd in light of the record its citizens have made in the recent past. It is odder still when one recalls the closeness of the election that paved the way for statehood at Champoeig in 1843.

Historians disagree on the actual fact that day of the "Great Divide" when Americans forced Frenchmen and employees of the Hudson's Bay Company on the banks of the Willamette. One recalled 23 years later that 52 Americans voted for Territorial status and the margin of victory was two! Another claims the American majority was five.
Perhaps apocryphal, another story maintains the near-legendary mountain man Joe Meek strode firmly across the dividing line and singly changed Oregon's course from British to that of the United States.
Whatever the fact, each vote is important. But its importance disappears if it's never cast!
