*Blood plasma from black donors helps skin cancer patients who are white. Scientists at the U of Washington report that the plasma stimulates the system to fight tumor cells.

*Chronic nasal allergies in children may result in intermittent hearing loss. If undetected, this can lead to poor school performance and possible psychiatric problems.

*Prostaglandins, the new wonder drug not yet on the market, can be derived from sea animals found on coral reefs off the Florida coast and can be produced at 5% of the cost of the synthetic prostaglandins. This will aid research hampered by previous higher prices.
