Humes and Wilkinson Honored at Coffee

The Deacons of the Presbyterian church put on a surprise during the coffee-hour following the worship service Sunday morning, when an appropriately decorated cake honored Glenn Humes, Jr. and Tedd Wilkinson, who graduated from high school this June, the former from Santiam High and the latter from Stayton High. Decorating the cake were a motor-board with diploma, a cross, and a flag. Young Humes was in the process of leaving to join the U. S. Navy and Wilkinson plans to attend college.

Rev. Luther Kurtz, who gave the sermon Sunday morning, took pictures of the boys and the decorated cake in their honor, and Rev. Ernest Franklin was asked to give the blessing and say a few words appropriate to the occasion. About 40 people attended the affair which was arranged by Donna Podrabsky even though she could not be present. Other Deacons, Faye Verbeck and Mary Kelly, did the serving with additional assistance. Glenn Humes, Sr. is moderator for the board of Deacons, and the Eugene Wilkinsons are active members of the congregation. Tedd Wilkinson sings in the choir each Sunday.

Bicycle Group Makes Stop in Mill City

A group of about 80 cyclists called the "Wandering Wheels" were in Mill City Wednesday where they made a brief stop before making their way to Bend, the destination they hoped to reach by Thursday.

Mike Sisco, age 20, of Harrisburg, Pa. and Steve Wilson, 18, of Washington, D. C. visited briefly in The Enterprise office Wednesday morning.

The boys said their group started from Lincoln City on Tuesday, spending the night on the Salem Academy Campus and planned to camp Wednesday night in the Cascades.

Their ultimate destination is the Atlantic Coast which they hope to reach about July 12.

Rambos Move to Salem Saturday

Mr. and Mrs. Mel Rambo moved Saturday to their new home in Salem, after a life-long residency in this area. However, the Rambos said they will always consider Mill City "home" and retain interests here.

Their move will not be complete until June 30 as years of acquiring "things" takes time to sort. Assisting with moving are Mr. and Mrs. Russell Nelson of Oregon City, who have recently purchased property there. Mrs. Nelson (Laura) is the Rambos daughter.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gruver have purchased the Rambo home and plan on taking possession July 1. New address for the Rambos is Paradise Island Mobile Park, 3100 Turner Rd. S. E. Space #160, Salem 97302.

"YOUR LAND AND MY LAND"

by Hazel Hayes

Pure Americana—

In many small communities the country over, a 4th of July parade down main street is always in order. This is the time the kids decorate their bicycles and search in the attic for costumes. All the horses in the neighborhood are scrubbed and groomed. Some-times there are antique autos. And the bands, resplendent in uniforms, are "Kings of the road."

Mr. Mustard is a palomino Welsh pony with long white tail and mane, very frisky. Carolyn found a southern-belle costume complete with bouffant ruffled skirt, many petticoats, little perky hat, and one of those ruffled flower-bedecked parasols. Dad was ultra-stylish in black mustache, derby hat, vest, old-fashioned tie, spats and duster.

Mustard found himself hitched to a little one-seat cart much to his nervousness. A little girl pony on the street set him off. Mustard walked on his hind feet to show off.

When he got to the parade gathering-place and saw all the horses he jumped all over the street — wouldn't he have. When the parade started he wasn't going to leave those horses! He whinnied at them, yelled at them, shook his head and backed into a truck—gone a hundred feet and the harness broke. A by-stander came with some nylon cord. Another few feet and the bridle fell off. Pony at a trot Dad stayed with the reins—couldn't stop him—nothing in the pony's mouth. Carolyn rolled out over the wheel but couldn't run because she stumbled over her long beautiful skirt. She forgot she had the fancy parasol in her hand. Poor parasol—ribs broken. Her roll over the wheel broke the sign on the side of the cart. "Sunday, come a courtin'."

By the time Dad was out of the cart, everybody on the street was yelling. He caught Mustard by the neck or mane or something, but, no sir, Mustard wouldn't take the bit. He clenched his teeth. Then the nylon cord which was fashioned under his tail came untied. This time they tied it with many knots.

They jumped into the cart and sailed off. Carolyn held one reign with her broken parasol in the other hand. Dad had the other reign and holding onto his hat. He was having trouble with his mustache, too—had to keep pressing it onto his upper lip.

The parade made frequent stops, but Mustard knew no stops. So around and around they went missing everybody. Dad kept shouting, "We don't have any brakes." And Carolyn kept shouting "Whoa, Mustard."

Poor Dad. He said, "Let's pull into a side street." But not Carolyn. She stayed right

Elliotts Write From Alaska

In a recent communication from Laddy and Glenda Elliott who are with Arctic Missions, Inc., in Palmer, Alaska where he does maintenance work, they mention that their daughter, Lisa, assists the wrangler with the horses at Victory Bible Camp; daughter Patty and Glen Alsworth plan a wedding for July 14th and further preparation for Christian service; son Lonny and Kristy Lewis are making plans to be married soon after he returns from his overseas cruise; and the other son, Mike, and his wife, Lisa (formerly Gabriel), await the time they can again be together after the cruise. Both boys are aboard the U.S. S. Niagara Falls and should be returning at the end of July.

The Elliotts also mention that they are thankful for Patty's being very much improved in her state of health. As dormitory parents, the Elliotts are proud that several of the nine Seniors graduating from Victory High this year plan to attend Arctic Bible Institute in the Fall.

The periodical letters are sent out by Mrs. Joyce Lonbeck of Scio, with the members of Scio Baptist church helping with the addressing. A number of Mill City residents are on the mailing list.

There were a few miracles and no one was hurt.
