At Last: Films On Dog Training!

The trouble with most training films is, there's either a feast or a famine. For golfers, plant workers, soldiers, camera buffs and others — you name it — there's a feast of how-to-do-it films. But for films on how to train your dog, it's been a long famine. Except for a few oldies, nothing.

But now, at last, there's good news for America's dog owners who are frustrated amateur trainers! A new series of five excellent 15-minute films show you everything you need to know about training your dog. And they're available to groups on loan without charge!

Entitled "Dog Obedience Training," these films star America's foremost dog training team of Milo and Margaret Pearsall, presented by the makers of ALPO.

Each film demonstrates a different training stage, guiding you as far as you and your pet want to go: Kindergarten Puppy Training, Basic & Novice Obedience, Open Dog Obedience, Utility Dog Obedience, and Training for Tracking.

The Puppy Training Film. A young, inexperienced couple with their first puppy asks "Can anyone learn how to train his dog?" and "Is my dog smart enough to learn?" With a reassuring "Yes," the Pearsalls prove it as this film moves from step to step.

Their approach to training is from the dog's viewpoint. What he sees, and how he sees it. For example, a door is 15 feet high to a puppy, and a step looks 8 feet high. So, they make training a game to be enjoyed by the pup.

Purebred Boxer

We see how the way a person talks makes a strong impression on a young dog. Dogs have feelings. Even the way you look at them is significant. Glaring can upset a dog.

Among many beginner's tips are:
— Choosing a name that doesn't sound like a training command
— Getting him used to a training collar and lead breaking
— Teaching the pup to come to the trainer

Any group may borrow these films from the ALPO Film Library: dog clubs, schools, civic, church and service groups, etc. Just write me at ALPO Pet Foods, Box 2187, Allentown Pa. 18001, requesting "Dog Obedience Training Films." State your 1st and 2nd choice dates which should be at least 30 days from your letter date.

Next, I'll review the "Basic & Novice Obedience" film. Watch for it.
