

THE GREAT CONSUMER COVER-UP

Proposals to set up still another "consumer agency"—this time to do battle with other federal agencies—ran headlong into a congressional filibuster, which may yet prove to be a good thing.

While filibusters often are considered sportsmanlike, this one seems to be uncovering a perhaps fatal defect in the idea.

Supporters say the agency would be a kindly ombudsman, protecting the "consumer interest" from all kind of evil throughout grassroots America. This is the cover-up. Opponents have contended all along that the new agency is really intended to give consumer activists power to interfere with everything in the economy—from local agriculture to international trade—with chaotic results.

Also, by letting the newest bureaucrat intervene in the affairs of all other bureaucrats—getting into files, disputing their decisions, demanding explanations and even suing their fellow officials—the whole U. S. government will wind up in unmitigated chaos.

Now the chaos is already showing up—the longer the filibuster goes, the more people learn about it and "want out" of the mess. First, organized labor won almost total exemption—it didn't want a consumer agent "poking its nose in our business." Then all radio-TV license renewals were let off the hook. Then banks got their customers' private financial records excluded—and rightly so. Next, small business was excused from answering questionnaires. Now, the nation's farmers are up in arms because the new consumer champion naturally would interfere with all farm programs. Other disturbing groups are waiting in the wings with dozens of similar exclusions.

It all seems to prove the point that the bill isn't really good for anybody—we all have interests that may be bigger than our "consumer interest."

Fire Season Ends in County

Fire season terminated in the Clackamas-Marion District of the Oregon State Forestry Dept. at midnight, Monday, Oct. 28, 1974.

Burning permits are still required all year. Burning periods and burning regulations vary from county to county and from fire district to fire district. Local fire permits issuing agencies should be contacted for burning regulations.

Logging operators are no longer required to furnish watchman service or maintain fire fighting equipment at their logging sites.

A high fire danger period threatened the district until relief came by substantial rainfall on the 21st of October and again on the 28th.

The district experienced 29 forest fires this year as opposed to 25 last year. Twenty-seven fires were man-caused. This is an increase of seven man-caused fires over last year. The major causes being smoker, debris burning and campers. Dist. Forester Chan Bunke urges the public to become more fire conscious now and next summer so that forest fires can be reduced to a minimum.

Twenty-two of the 29 fires were held to less than one quarter acre. The largest fire
