RALPH ALLEN MOORE.

As I lay ill in my bed, on Dec. 30, 1901, I noticed a team driving past my window quite rapidly, and the carriage contained our dear student Ralph Allen Moore and his fast friend, Mr. Caricker.

Mr. Caricker was bringing Ralph home to see his good parents, as he had a sprained ankle, which he had received while skating one day before Christmas; and his boot had caused an abrasion on the side of the ankle, which became poisoned from his stocking.

It was not thought to be serious at first, but being very painful, he was placed under the physician's care, but he gradually became worse.

About three weeks ago, his father, accompanied by Dr. F. E. Smith, took little Ralph to the Florence Sanitarium, at Salem, going via Sacramento. An operation was performed, whereby the physicians found that the trouble was apparently tuberculosis of the bone, and gradually became worse, until the night of February 6, 1902, when the Death Angel came and carried his beautiful, spotless spirit to his heavenly home.

He was born in Lakeview, May 16, 1890, and was the youngest son of Joseph W. and Annie Moore, who reared their boy in the paths of righteousness and truth. He led an exemplary life, and was honest, conscientious, always discharging his duties cheerfully and faithfully, and was first in his class among the boys. He was precocious in thought and action, always lending a helping hand where he might do good. He dared to do right; he dared to be true, and was greatly beloved by his schoolmates and friends, and was the pride of his teacher.

The teachers of our public school are all in mourning over the lost student; not none of them was so near and dear to Ralph as the one who was teaching him, and how his face told her, as she said "Ralph, good-bye," the morning before his parents started away with him, "I will never be able to write to you." Great tears stood in the good boy's eyes, as he gave that long and farewell look.

He bore all his sickness with patience and fortitude, labored and waited, but did not despair; and when told by the physicians that there was no hope for his recovery, he told his father to write a letter to his mother, to comfort her, telling his teacher good-bye, and what to do with his belongings.

No hope now but to resign all to his Savior and meet him in peace, when all nature is hushed to rest; the departing soul, like the vanishing sun, peacefully disappearing, only to shine in another and brighter hemisphere.

"And since at last, dear Ralph was called,
And sweetly to death resigned,
May he not still be happier
Than those he leaves behind?"

And as one looked on the beautiful casket, and beheld within it the wan and wasted face you could see nothing but purity of mind and soul in such a body, but grand to behold, the longer you gazed, the more beauty arose. How true are the words, "At rest," engraved on the top of the beautiful casket.

The face shows peace and contentment, with something of an angel light, and "At rest," with God whose countenance is calm and serene as the face of Heaven, unspotted by the shadow of the cloud.

Choice Meat Drawing.

On Monday morning a prize meat drawing was inaugurated at Lane & Fitzgerald's market. Every cash purchaser of 25 cents worth of meats is to be given a ticket with the purchaser's name thereon, and a duplicate ticket with the name is dropped into a sealed box. On Saturday evening next three disinterested citizens will be called in to witness the drawing. The first name drawn from the box will be given a four-pound loin roast of beef for the Sunday dinner; the second name gets a three-pound choice roast of pork; the third a three-pound choice roast of mutton. Such a choice drawing should become popular in Lakeview. Everybody ought to take a chance at that free Sunday dinner proposition.

Notice.

I am called away to be absent about two weeks, and during that time my business will be in charge of Wm. Gunther. Any business left in his care will receive prompt attention upon my return.
