Ancient Bones and Relics.

In excavating near the brick kiln for brick dirt, many ancient Indian bones and relics have been unearthed. This particular place appears to have been an Indian burying ground, but from the solid formation of the dirt and the depth to which these things are found, it must have been many hundreds of years ago when they were put there. Perfect mortars and pestles have been found and in one place ten feet beneath the surface the foot and leg of a prehistoric horse or cow, or some unknown animal, was found. The men who are digging are expecting to run across a mastodon at any time.

The Alturas newspapers seem to be playing ball with politics lately. Two weeks ago the New Era came out a true blue democratic paper, and the last issue of the Plaindealer contained the following:

During the absence of the editor of this paper, it has been changed to a "black" Republican paper, although it isn't noticeable. The reason of its change, however, is from the fact, that the writer and all the employees are good Republicans. Col. Thompson, the editor is expected home tomorrow.

There'll be something doing when Editor Thompson returns.

Lake county's delinquent tax for this year will be very small. There are only a few who have paid no taxes at all, and only a dozen or so that paid half of their taxes last spring. Under the provision of the new law, by paying half of the taxes when due, the taxpayer could save a 12 per cent penalty. All taxes that are not paid on or before the first Monday in October become delinquent immediately after that date and the sheriff is required to advertise and sell the property at once. Sheriff Dunlap sent out notices this week and he thinks there will be less than half a dozen, if any, when the time expires to pay taxes.
