FRIDAY WAS FIRE DAY

Lakeview Had Five "Blazes" in the Space of Eight Hours and the End is Exciting.

Last Friday was red letter day in Lakeview for fires. It's a wonder some one, or all of the fires, did not end disastrously, but fortunately none of them proved very serious. Five distinct small fires was the record for that day. Lakeview has scarcely any protection against the demon—we are practically at the mercy of fire should it come upon us, owing to an inadequate supply of water.

The first was a call from the Oregon Feed Stables, but the flames were quenched before getting beyond control.

The second was a small blaze at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Pierce Combs. Mrs. Combs went into a dark closet with a candle to search for something, and some clothing caught fire. She gave the alarm and Charlie Reid who was near by promptly answered and subdued the flames. It was a narrow escape.

The third was a small blaze at the residence of "Bud" Harvey about the noon hour. It was quickly subdued.

The fourth was the most serious conflagration of the day. It occurred in the forenoon at the residence of Mrs. J. Hamersley, and only by a miracle was it not attended by a fatality. Andrew Hamersley placed some rosin in a pan on the kitchen stove, preparatory to repairing a boat, and then had some business up town, cautioning his mother as he left not to keep up too much fire. Mrs. Hamersley evidently forgot the warning, and filled the stove with wood. She went to another part of the house, and soon the odor of burning rosin reached her. She repaired to the kitchen and found the melted rosin on fire. In the excitement of the moment the aged lady undertook to carry the burning stuff outside, but when she opened the door the wind blew the flame in her face, scorching her painfully. Mrs. Hamersley dropped the pan to the floor and at the same time fell to the floor herself. Mrs. John Clark, a neighbor, heard her cries for help and hurried to the scene just in time to drag "Grandma" out of reach of the flames.

Soon Mrs. W. M. Harvey, Mrs. Jackson and Mrs. Wislhire came to the rescue and after forming a bucket brigade soon had the fire, which had spread all over the kitchen, under control, and the work of a few minutes completely put it out. These ladies deserve great credit for the splendid work they performed, for had it not been for them Mrs. Hamersley would have undoubtedly perished and the house been destroyed. Everything in the kitchen—oil cloth on the floor table, chairs, dishes and ceiling were ruined by fire. Fully insured in a company represented by J. W. Maxwell.

The fifth and last fire for the day was the burning of an outhouse in the rear of Eblon Woodcock's residence, caused by dumping ashes and live coals within its sacred precincts. The building was a total loss. The gallant foreman of the Examiner office, Mr. Bowman, quickly rang the fire bell, and soon half the town was rushing madly to the scene of conflagration. The hose company did not turn out, and a bucket brigade splashed water on the side of the residence next to the fire, and kept that building from igniting. It was a wild, mad scene. Mr. Schweinfurth and others did valiant work and saved the east portion of the lot. In running to the fire Jonas King kicked a cow over, and Cobb Henkle jumped over a house that happened to be in his way, and S. F. Ahlstrom ran over a bicyclist, telling him at the same time for God's sake to get out of the way and give somebody that could travel a chance to get there.
