LAKEVIEW, OREGON, JULY 23, 1903.

LAKE COUNTY OVERLOOKED.

"Oregon against the world for wool," says Henry Blackman, who is collecting samples of Oregon fleeces for the state exhibit at St. Louis and for the Lewis and Clark Exposition. "Our wool exhibit will excel anything of the kind that the world has ever seen."

Mr. Blackman has scoured all over Eastern Oregon for samples and has received many assurances of co-operation from growers and dealers. "I find great enthusiasm for the Fair among all wool-producing districts," he says. Among the towns which have pledged him aid are Heppner, Shaniko, Elgin, Ontario, Baker City, Pendleton and Huntington. Mr. Blackman's pockets are bulging with specimens of fine woolen staples. All this from the Oregonian. Lake County, however, was overlooked like a white cheek, evidently because Mr. Blackman thinks like all Portland and the balance of Oregon, that Lake is too far away, don't amount to much anyway, and is practically a part of California. This is all right, and we have for some time felt "how true it is." Our wool goes to California or direct to the manufacturers in the East, so if we want to display our wool at the St. Louis Fair, (which is the best in Oregon) we can send it ourselves or include it with the display from California. When Oregon is spoken of as a whole no more thought of including Lake county is given than if we were located in the Fiji Islands. We had just as well be there so far as Portland is concerned. Politically, we are a part of Oregon, and our good offices are always solicited when anything is wanted in Portland. Commercially we belong to California, which fact seems to have just dawned upon a few of Portland's business men. But before any action is taken toward redeeming Lake county, California will have us annexed, and we will be willing victims.

Lake is likened unto the boy whose father refused to own him or have anything to do with him, only when he wanted some work done. The boy ever since his birth, having been treated like a son by a neighbor, became tired of his ill treatment and took up with the man who looked upon him as a father should, and he was given every chance, and grew up a model man.

Our mail facilities between here and Portland continues to be out of joint some place. Very frequently mail goes astray and does not turn up for several days. Last Friday morning two bunches of Oregonians came in together, one was dated the 14, and the other the 11th. It is quite possible that this delayed bunch was accidentally sent through to San Francisco on the railroad, or some other seaport town, but these accidents happen so frequently, that it is becoming quite monotonous, and some means should be brought to bear heavily upon the absent minded mail clerks to remember that our mail is slow at best, and we are lost without our daily mail. The Pope could die a thousand times and we would know nothing of it, just because some mail clerk was thinking of his best girl, or where he was going to spend his summer vacation. If a little postoffice scandal virus was injected into a few of these forgetful youths, probably they would remember that we need our mail every day 365 times a year.

There is no real substitute for wisdom, but silence will give you a reputation for knowing a good deal more than you know.

The French Government expects to expend at least 600,000 francs on President Loubet's visit to England and on the coming visit of King Emmanuel to Paris.

Major Frederick Muller has ended a series of successful experiments in raising silk worms from eggs furnished by the department of agriculture, at Santa Fe, N. M.

Irene Waldron of Irvington, N. J., who was born without arms, has learned to sew with her toes and is succeeding admirably in learning other feminine accomplishments.

President Loubet will resume his study of astronomy as soon as he lays down the cares of state. An observatory is being built on the grounds of the chateau which the president recently purchased.

For the first time in the history of Spain beyond a doubt a workman has been elected a member of the cortes. His name is Jaime Angles. He is a cooper by trade, and he represents Barcelona.

The Big tent "Endeavor," where the Christian Endeavor Convention is being held, at Denver, was blown over on the 13th while 8000 people were attending the proceedings. The injured numbered a score, but none seriously.

The man who spends about all his spare change buying firecrackers on the Fourth, pulls for America's yacht, yells for the home team at a ball game and stamps his feet and whistles every time he hears Yankee Doodle played, is a man that can be trusted.

An old soldier of Salem asks for a pension on the ground that he was frightened by the musketry and cannonading in a hot skirmish so that his nervous system was shattered. It is likely that the pension will be refused, as it is evident the old soldier has plenty of nerve left.

The reply of George Meredith to the report that he was in a dying condition recalls the cablegram of Mark Twain from Europe that the report of his death "was grossly exaggerated." Mr. Meredith says the report that he "is expiring is incorrect. I am going on well enough."

Dr. Julius Stoklasa, an eminent chemist of Berlin, has attracted considerable attention by contending that alcohol and carbolic acid are products of the breath of animal and vegetable bodies. He is not prepared to say to what extent the use of alcohol aids life and energy or retards it, but he is making elaborate experiments.

In his early days Sir Thomas Lipton denied himself almost every pleasure except that of amassing a fortune. Calling one day on a counsel on business he was offered a cigar by the official. "No, thank you," said Sir Thomas (then Mr.) Lipton. "Although I am the biggest smoker in England I never smoke cigars." "What do you smoke?" was the surprised query. "Bacon," was the prompt reply.
