JUST AS YOUNG AS THEY USED TO BE.

A number of the lady members of the Eastern Star Lodge early in the winter organized a "needle club," the meeting places to be the homes of the members on each Friday afternoon which were selected from their names in alphabetical order. The club was not organized especially for the purpose of sewing and gossiping, but each member was expected to post themselves on one of Shakespeare's plays which had been previously decided upon, for discussion, and also to repeat quotations.

The Secretary prepares her minutes in a way that are very entertaining and read like a chapter in an up-to-date novel.

The social editor (not the fighting editor) was shown a unique invitation from Miss Hall to the members to meet last Friday evening at her home, which was written in the the style of a 7-year-old school girl, with this quotation added!

"Backward, turn backward
Oh time in your flight,
Make me a child again
Just for (Friday) night."

In true childish manner and dress the members appeared at the yard gate and in very high pitched voices they plaintively piped out: "Oh, Pearly, Oh, Laurie, we can't get the gate open." After being assured by the aforesaid, who appeared at the door, that all they need do was to push and the gate would open, the nine little girls were received with open arms by the hostess and were royally entertained in child fashion.

Each member carried a little doll or some plaything, and as they were requested to recite a Mother Goose rhyme, and to illustrate the same by a drawing, it would certainly put their own children to shame, for rudeness in manner and construction.

Laurie won first prize—a handsome A. B. C. book, for best drawing and Belle got a "nigger" baby for guessing the most quotations. The donkey was in need of a tail, and Lilly captured the prize—a squeaking doll, for pinning the tail where they are usually worn, but Minnie got over on the wrong end of the donkey and had to be content with the "booby" prize,—a colored Alfonso and Gaston handkerchief.

After shy little Emma was initiated into the club, some recitations were rendered, but all efforts were fruitless to persuade the timid little Ida, Rosy, Maye and the dignified Marye and Della to sing.

Delicious "goody-goodies" were served by the hostess after pinning bibs on the girls and inviting them to sit on the floor "so's t'" not spill anything.

At a late hour the girls departed to the homes of their ma's having voted Pearlle an able hostess and asking if they might come again.

Planning R. R. Extension.

Civil Engineer J. A. McCall left at noon for Yreka, where he has been called by the management of the Klamath River Railroad for consultation in regard to the proposed extension of that road from Pokeyama to Klamath Falls, says the Tidings. Mr. McCall is thoroughly familiar with the topography of the ground between the two places, as he made the original survey for the Oregon Midland Co. His summons to Yreka is believed to be significant, as looking towards the immediate beginning of work on the extension.

Moody Out For Congress Again.

The Oregonian says Malcolm A. Moody is an aspirant for congressional honors, expecting to succeed J. N. Williamson in the Second District. It also asserts, with apparently some degree of authority, that Mr. Moody is likely to carry off the prize.
